North Dakota Republican Asks Candidate to Repudiate Attacks on Smith

PROBLEM IS IMPORTANT

Action on Issue May Influence Vote of Pivotal States in November

Washington — (AP) — A bristling statement full of terms such as "political has been" and "disgruntled" Republican office-seeker was directed at former Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota, Thursday by Senator Smoot of Utah.

Smoot's utterances were brought about by a recent letter in which Hansbrough, now supporting Governor Smith, asked Herbert Hoover to repudiate all statements seeking to appeal to religious prejudice in the campaign.

The Utah senator said that "no decent man tolerates publications built on religious prejudices," and that Mr. Hoover "has already in his acceptance speech made the strongest statement on religious intolerance probably ever delivered in the United States." He accused Hansbrough of voting to deprive him of his senate seat because Smoot was a member of the Mormon church.

Washington — More than passing attention is being given in political quarters to the open letters written by Henry C. Hansbrough, for twenty years a member of the Republican national committee and a representative and United States senator from North Dakota. He calls on Mr. Hoover to repudiate the support of weekly newspapers and publications, particularly one that is supposed to be circulating 5,000,000 copies of an attack on Governor Smith's religion.

Mr. Hansbrough says that in supporting the Hoover candidacy, the publication is "A vote for Smith is a vote for the Pope." Mr. Hoover, in his acceptance speech, has already deplored religious intolerance, remarking that "the glory of our American ideals is the right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience."

The question has arisen, however, as to whether the Republican nominee should before the end of the campaign make another statement repudiating the introduction of the religious issue and arguing against any religious test in a presidential campaign.

LIKE CAL'S PROBLEM

The problem is somewhat the same as the one that confronted President Coolidge in 1924 when he was being urged specifically to denounce the Klan and mention it by name.

Two different currents of advice came to Mr. Coolidge—one to repudiate the Klan with Rooseveltian emphasis and the other to let the issue severely alone. He adopted the latter course. In this campaign, however, the issue has become attached to the candidate in opposition to the Republican nominee and the issue in political circles is that Mr. Hoover does not enjoy the same advantage from a strategic viewpoint as did Mr. Coolidge in receiving support from the Klan groups.

The campaign in many states has been centered on the religious issue and Mr. Hansbrough in his open letter specifically refers to Tennessee as one of the states which reports tell him may turn from the Democratic column because of the religious issue. Mr. Hoover is planning to make a speech in Tennessee. One suggestion is that he might make his own repudiation of intolerance in the very atmosphere where he is supposed to be the "silent beneficiary," as Mr. Hansbrough calls him, of religious prejudice.

WORKS BOTH WAYS

Certainly as matters stand today, the Democrats are counting heavily on the fact that attacks on Governor Smith's religion will tend to keep Republican Catholics voting the traditional way and it is known that Republican leaders feel uneasy about New York, Massachusetts and New Jersey for that very reason. Some of them have said openly that if Senator Heflin came north to campaign against Smith he would draw Republican Catholics to the Democratic standard as an expression of resentment on their part, irrespective of all other issues. Mr. Heflin isn't campaigning in the north and probably will not. And if Mr. Heflin before election day makes the kind of statement on the whole subject that it is being reported he may make, it could conceivably have the effect of holding in line thousands of republicans.

G. O. P. Split On Hoover In Dakota Meet

Non-partisan Faction Refuses to Indorse Republican's Candidacy

Bismarck, N. D. — (AP) — North Dakota Republicans Thursday had split over the question of supporting Herbert Hoover for president.

The Non-Partisan League faction of the party was on record as refusing to indorse Hoover's candidacy, while the Independent Republicans are backing the former secretary of commerce.

The action came at a meeting here Wednesday, called to organize the Republican state central committee. The Independents offered a resolution indorsing Mr. Hoover and his stand on agriculture. This was defeated by a vote of 19 to 9.

As a result the "Independents or 'Regular' Republicans" organized separately and decided to carry on a vigorous campaign for the national ticket, as nominated at Kansas City.

The Non-Partisans in their resolutions criticized Mr. Hoover as a "tool of big business" and asserted that the Republican party had strayed from its original course. The resolutions made it clear that the action was based on a lack of faith in the Republican party and its candidates rather than an indorsement of Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

NON-PARTISANS SPLIT

Several of the non-partisans backed the original Hoover resolution, among them being Fred J. Graham of Ellendale, Republican national committeeman, Stephen Terhorst, of Donny Brook, who is the manager of the Hoover-Curtis clubs in North Dakota.

Both Graham and Terhorst urged that the party should remain "regular" in this campaign and back Hoover. They later joined the Independents' meeting.

The "regulars" were defeated by the committee members from districts which had been hostile to the present Coolidge administration and the nomination of Mr. Hoover.

The Independents' committee also disregarded the stand taken by United States Senator Lynn J. Frazier and Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, who have issued statements announcing support for Mr. Hoover. Both Mr. Nye and Mr. Frazier were elected with Non-Partisan League indorsements.

Mrs. Coolidge Packs But President Goes Fishing

Superior — (AP) — Packing took hold of the summer White House in earnest Thursday.

With President Coolidge's return to Washington only a few days off, the time had come Thursday for all most last minute preparations. Most of the household linen was placed away in trunks and boxes while the chief executive's bulkier personal effects, such as books and papers were also packed.

Leaving such preparations to Mrs. Coolidge and the White House attendants, President Coolidge tried to make the most of his last chances for an open air life before returning to the capital. Stating that his fishing would be the last thing to be packed, he had arranged Wednesday

COUNCIL PUTS SUBWAY UP TO PUBLIC VOTE

Orders Referendum on Whether Improvement Should Be Made

Opponents of the subway ordered constructed on E. Wisconsin-ave by the Wisconsin Railroad commission directed a surprise attack on supporters of the project at the council meeting Wednesday night, precipitating a new and bitter argument on the old subject and forcing the entire affair into new entanglements.

As a result, Appleton residents will be granted an opportunity of indicating their sentiment on the subway. On the election ballots for Nov. 4, they will be asked to vote on the question of whether the structure should be built.

This turn of affairs followed adoption of a resolution, introduced by Alderman R. F. McGillan, Second ward, and seconded by Alderman W. H. Vanderheyden, Fifth ward, directing that the city clerk be instructed to have the question inserted on the ballots.

It was a surprise blow, and left a few aldermen undecided for several minutes how to cast their votes. Whether this coup will have any bearing on the outcome of the subway matter is a matter of conjecture of course. In view of the fact that the commission has ordered the construction started, only a rehearing by the commission or court action can countermand the order, it is pointed out. Supporters of the resolution believe, however, that a direct opinion by the people might influence some of the council members to change their votes on efforts to block the project.

The McGillan resolution was adopted by a 7 to 5 vote. The aldermen formerly aligned with the trunks backing the subway, G. T. Richard and W. H. Geyner, both of the Third ward, voted for the resolution. The other affirmative votes were cast by Alderman Mike Steinhauer and Mark S. Catlin, First ward; McGillan and George Brautigan, Fourth ward; and Vanderheyden, Fifth ward.

Aldermen C. D. Thompson and John R. Dierich, Second ward, Richard Refke and Philipp Vogt, Sixth ward, and Harvey Priebe, Fifth ward, remained steadfast in their opposition. Following a slight hesitation after his name was called, Alderman Vogt at first chose not to vote. When prevailed upon to express an opinion one way or the other, he decided in the negative.

Following introduction of the resolution, Mayor Albert C. Rule, who has consistently opposed the subway construction at the costs indicated in recent bids, explained the purpose of the new move.

"It is the belief of part of the council that the people do not favor the subway," he said.

The home of Chauncey Pitts was the new bomb target. Pitts is a union tinner and has no direct connection with the Allen-A strike. His wife, however, is an inspector at the knitting plant. Mrs. Pitts and her 9-year-old daughter, Constance, were alone in their one-story frame building at 9 o'clock. Pitts was attending a union meeting.

CONSERVATIVES TO CONTROL SENATE

Indications Are That All but One Senator Are Renominated

Milwaukee — (AP) — The normal strength generally shown by Republicans prevails in the November election, the 1929 legislature will find the Conservative Republicans still in control of the senate.

Nine state senators sought renomination for reelection in the sixteen districts where vacancies were to be filled, and all were successful apparently except State Senator William L. Smith of Neillsville, author of the tax bill which figured prominently in the primary campaign.

Complete returns Thursday from the Twenty-fourth district which the Conservative Republican has represented since 1920 in the state senate showed he had been defeated by Walter J. Rush, Progressive Republican of La Crosse. Rush was a delegate to the Republican national convention and supported Norris for president.

Complete returns from the district which includes Clark, Taylor and Wood showed the vote to be: Rush, 7,907; Smith, 6,677.

GERMAN NOTE MOVE TOWARD EVACUATION

Geneva — (AP) — Representation of a memorandum by Germany to representatives of the allied powers was deemed Thursday to be the next step likely to be taken by the Germans in connection with their desire to get the allied troops out of the Rhineland.

This would officially open negotiations and afford a basis for a conference between delegates of Germany, France, Great Britain, Belgium and Italy.

Commercialization of the Dawes plan German railway bonds or industrial bonds, or both, was mentioned as a matter possibly up for study in connection with the evacuation negotiations. Silence was maintained as to whether an effort would be made to link the Rhineland question with the question of debts due the United States by the allies.

Elkhorn — (AP) — A laundry's symbol on the bed sheet that was wrapped about the body of a black-haired girl found slain in a culvert near here Aug. 22, was revealed Thursday as the outstanding clue to the mystery of her identity and her fate.

The markings upon which hopes for a solution were buoyed were found to have been made at a laundry here. Employees Thursday were checking through their files in an effort to trace the owner of the sheet. They indicated, officers said, that the sheet had been delivered to a customer in July.

Wales And Brother Off To Africa For Big Game

London — (AP) — The prince of Wales and his younger brother, the duke of Gloucester, left London at 3:15 Thursday afternoon enroute for a big game hunt and empire good will campaign in Africa. They departed without ceremony, traveling to Dover on an ordinary train. They will cross to France and sail from Marseilles.

London — (AP) — The Prince of Wales and his younger brother, the Duke of Gloucester, are sailing from Marseilles Thursday to hunt big game in Africa and also to spread imperial good will.

For days the two adventurers and popular sons of King George have been busy packing for the trip while the newspapers of London have been carrying accounts and pictures of the regions and the black people they will see.

Sailing from Marseilles the prince and his brother will go to Alexandria and then to Cairo and from there by motor to Ismailia on the Suez Canal. Here the British India steamer Malda will embark them for Mombassa, and there they will embark for the interior of Kenya.

The trip for the Prince of Wales holds heavy burdens of official duties. It is another one of those empire building drives in which the heir to the throne is already an experienced campaigner. He is busied with speeches, prepared for reviews and inspections and ready with the smiles that have spread his popularity widely.

It is thought that the duke will back up his elder brother in the shape. He, however, is looking forward avidly to his introduction to big game shooting. Although the Duke of Gloucester is an accomplished shot, he has not yet known the grand thrill of knocking over the big game in the African jungles which the Prince of Wales experienced on his former tour of the dark continent.

JOHN COOLIDGE HAS NO JOB, IS NOT ENGAGED

Northampton, Mass. — (AP) — John Coolidge is unemployed and jobless. He is to visit his grandmother, Mrs. Elmina Goodhue, he made both of those points clear in an interview after coming from Brule, Wis., where he spent a vacation with his parents.

"I really don't know what I would like to do," he said here, adding he had not definitely decided what line of work to pursue.

In the same conversation he took occasion to deny that he betrothed to Florence Trumbull, daughter of the governor of Connecticut, in whose company he has been frequently. He did say, however, that he probably would leave here the first of the week to go to Hartford, Conn., to meet Miss Trumbull on her return from a European vacation.

LINK BOOTLEG CHIEFTAIN WITH MACHINE GUN FIRM

Philadelphia — (AP) — District Attorney John Monaghan said Thursday that he had discovered evidence linking Max "Doc" Hoff, alleged "king of Philadelphia bootleggers," with Edward S. Goldberg, proprietor of a store which deals in military goods, bullet proof vests, machine guns and other weapons used in gang warfare.

This was the latest development in the grand jury investigation of Philadelphia's underworld activities. Hoff, Monaghan said, had established an alliance between the police and the underworld.

Arrested Wednesday night on a charge of perjury after he had testified before the grand jury, Goldberg was released Thursday morning on heavy bail. Friends and henchmen of the bootlegger were seized and held for the police.

The first suggested site for the bridge, a two span construction considered by an act of midday between the two points, was from Marquette, Ia., to the Wisconsin shore, a more direct route. It met with the disapproval of Prairie du Chien, Marquette and Marquette, Ia., citizens who formed a company to finance the project.

Green Wins Over Welsh By 200,000

Michigan Governor Renominated for Office by Huge Majority

Detroit — (AP) — With only a few scattered precincts missing, the majority by which Gov. Fred W. Green won the Republican nomination over George W. Welsh of Grand Rapids, in Michigan's primary election Tuesday, had mounted Thursday to more than 200,000 votes.

Green received 497,416 votes from 3,027 precincts out of 3,184 in the state reported while Welsh received 130,901.

Green Dickinson, incumbent lieutenant governor, maintained a sizeable majority over his nearest competitor, Fred L. Woodward of Detroit, on returns from 2,991 of the state's precincts.

Frank J. Sawyer of Grand Blanc, pitted up better than a 2 to 1 majority over Theodore H. Elferink for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

U. S. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Grand Rapids, who was unopposed for the Republican nomination, received a large courtesy vote. Returns from about half the precincts of the state show a received 171,127 votes for the short term nomination and 205,380 for the long term.

William A. Constock, who was unopposed for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, received 10,848 votes from 3,027 precincts reported, and John Bailey, Democratic senatorial candidate, also unopposed, received 7,612 for the short term nomination and 2,539 for the long term.

Robert M. Clancy, incumbent Republican congressman from the First district, (Detroit) defeated John B. Sonenski in a race that was not decided until the last votes were in.

Congressman James C. McLaughlin won in the Ninth district over Claude M. Curtis of Ludington, and H. Glenn Dunn of Muskegon.

The defeat of Beck marked the second setback for Senator La Follette in his role of maker of governors and partly dimmed his own personal victory in the primary election Tuesday in which he scored a 21 victory over George W. Mead of Wisconsin Rapids.

The year ago "Young Bob" supported Herman L. Ekern, who was defeated by Zimmerman who drew support from both Progressives and Conservatives.

Paying little attention to his own personal fortunes La Follette threw himself into the fight for Beck this year and made scores of speeches. Senator Blaine, who was nominated for governor, was a member of the Progressive Republican faction.

ANOTHER SCHOOL ADOPTS PROPOSED MUSICAL PROGRAM

54 Now Enrolled in Movement; Work Will Be Started Soon

School district No. 4, town of Cicero, at a special meeting Tuesday evening unanimously endorsed the rural school music program and voted to raise sufficient funds so the district school could be enrolled with those which will include music in their regular curriculum this fall. According to A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, there are now 54 schools which have endorsed the plan and agreed to raise funds to aid in defraying the expenses of the course.

There is room for several more schools, Mr. Meating said, but they must be enrolled this week. There is to be a meeting of the Stephenville school district Thursday evening when the music plan will be voted on.

Under the plan there will be a music supervisor for each 25 schools. These districts may be enlarged slightly to include a few more schools. Miss Lorene Fredrickson, a graduate of Lawrence Conservatory of music supervisor's course, was engaged some time ago to have charge of the first district, and Miss Caryl Short, supervisor of music in the public schools at West Bend for the past two years, was engaged this week to have charge of the second district. Miss Short also is a graduate of the Lawrence conservatory.

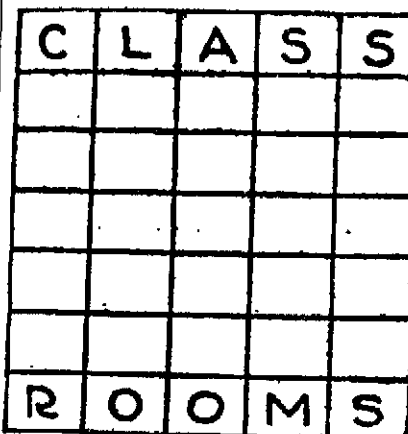

Five girls studied under Dr. Earl Baker, head of the music supervisors' department at the college Dr. Baker, with Mr. Meating, originated the plan under which music will be taught in the rural schools of the county this year. The girls are especially trained to follow Dr. Baker's program which has been found to work successfully in the grade schools of Appleton.

Outagamie county, it is said, is the first county of the state to propose a daily music program for the children of its rural schools and watchful, interested eyes are being trained on the county both by the state educational department and national educational authorities.

The supervisors, under Dr. Baker's plan, which has been widely praised by music education authorities, will spend a short period each week at each rural school, supervising the work that has been accomplished by the regular teacher during the week and laying out the work for the week ahead.

POLICE COURT IS NEEDED BY CITY, COUNCIL IS TOLD

Alderman Mark Catlin Asks Council Members to Give Proposal Consideration

Establishment of a municipal police court in Appleton again was urged by Alderman Mark Catlin, First ward, at the meeting of the common council Wednesday night. Although he presented no resolution permitting definite action, he beseeched council members to study the suggestion thoroughly preparatory to a formal consideration of the proposed addition to the city's judicial system in the future.

Municipal court now is so crowded every morning with petty police cases that jury trials are ordinarily delayed from one to two hours, and the court is so far behind in its schedule that it usually takes from 60 to 80 days to get a jury case on the calendar, he told the aldermen. This condition, he added, has existed for a long time, and clearly indicates the need of a new branch.

The alderman pointed out that Judge Theodore Berg has a mountainous task to contend with, making it humanly impossible to dispose of all the work on scheduled time. With no other relief in sight, he said he believes establishment of a new branch is the only alternative.

Little was said about the probable location of such a court in case the council decided to act on the suggestion. It is not believed likely, however, that room could be found in the court house. One of the possible

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or over increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.

locations mentioned was the city hall.

Asked by Alderman Philipp Vogt, Sixth ward, if the majority of petty cases didn't originate in the county outside the city limits of Appleton, making the court matter a problem for the county instead of the city, Alderman Catlin assured the council that most of the cases were from this city.

Many other cities the size of Appleton have such courts, and the time is long past when a similar branch is needed here, he pointed out. He believed the court would practically pay for itself.

GOOD TASTE, HERE Asks Little For Its Beauty

Eight Pieces Are Low Indexed at $235.00

China... $53.00

The "Chancellor" suite looks expensive, of course. Its Tudor influence is so authentically expressed, the beautifully figured walnut panels and maple onlays are so rich in coloring and tone, that you would expect this suite to cost a great deal. In fine finish and workmanship, too, it is the equal of furniture costing many times its price. You will find the explanation for such good taste at so low a price when you see the Berkey & Gay shopmark in one of the drawers. Created by these famous style leaders and designers, the "Chancellor" is a lovely example of the kind of furniture to be found in America's finest homes. At a price that puts its beauty easily within your reach.

Under a recent Federal Law you can give to your share of the $3,226,000,000 of government insurance the protection of a trust agreement.

What does this mean? Simply this:

You make your insurance payable to us as your trustee.

If you wish, you can combine any other insurance with your government policy into a single Trust Fund.

We will collect the insurance, invest the money wisely and pay out the income to those whom you name. The strongest feature of this plan is that you can also empower us to pay out parts of the principal to meet unexpected emergencies.

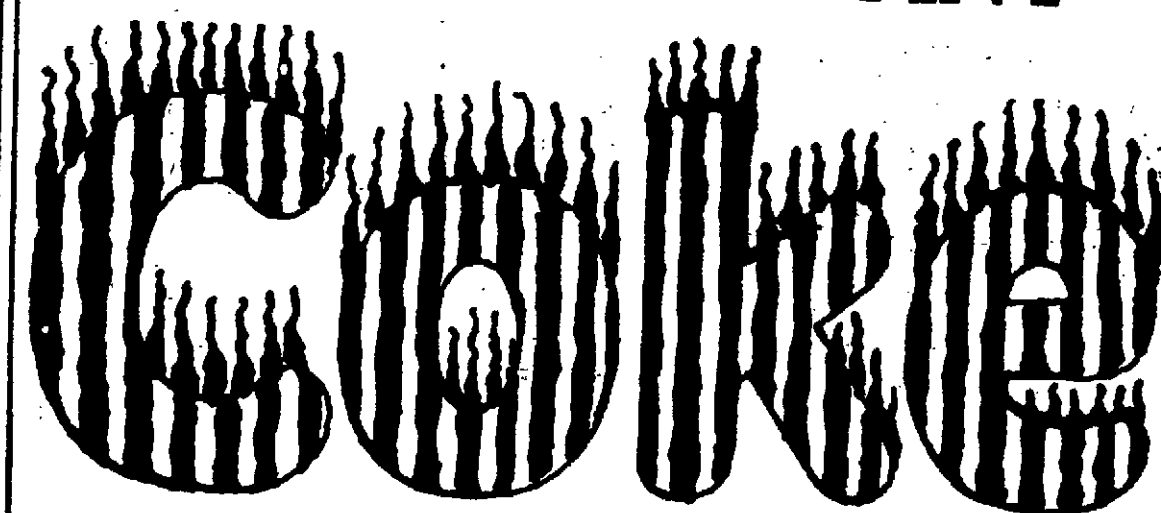

Business men have been following this plan for years. Now along comes Uncle Sam and says you can apply the plan to your government policy.

Let us give you the full details of this service. Ask for our trust officer.

Federal Officers Show Lack of Coordination as Night
Clubs Waxed Merry

BY PAUL HARRISON
New York—Federal officialdom has been staging Broadway's best show of late, and the title of it might be "Bang! Bang!"—with reference to heads.

It has to do with the very dilige-ent quest made recently along Broadway and tributary thoroughfares, including those leading to the steamship piers, for evidence of participation by J. Barleycorn in Broadway's nightly levity.

The big trouble is that the minor and major potentates of the federal prohibition-enforcing machinery insist on stepping all over each other's feet and even on banging their heads together at almost every turn.

FINGERS IN PIE
The dramatic personae in the performance are almost too numerous to mention, but a few of them are:
Mabel Walker Willebrandt, U. S.
assistant attorney general.

Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement.
Charles H. Tuttle, U. S. attorney for the southern district of New York.

Major Maurice Campbell, prohibition administrator for the New York district.
Col. William C. Conrow, acting surveyor of the port of New York.

The most recent collisions of the federal functionaries—or if not collu-sions, at least displays of burlesquelike lack of coordination—have had to do with the matter of alcoholic humidity in the night clubs and the matter of midnight steamship pier whoopie.

GRAND JURY ACT

Broadway got a great kick out of a sudden announcement that Philip M. Plant, William B. Leeds, Heywood Brown, Tommy Hitchcock of polo fame, and miscellaneous other youngish and oldish celebrities were to be herded into federal court and stripped by the grand jury of all information regarding night club liquor selling that they possessed.

But woe! As the big parade to the grand jury room got under way, District Attorney Tuttle stepped up and dispersed it. Orders from the circus-like procession came from Miss Willebrandt's office at Washington.
'twas said, but to Tuttle, who had been out of town, that made no difference. Making the show a public one didn't suit Tuttle at all.

GRAVITY AND SECRECY

Grave discussions between officialdom and newspaper reporters followed, in which not much of anything was said. Deep folds of secrecy remained draped over the recriminations which must have resulted backstage.

Only a day or two ago, there had been the incident of some hundreds of high and low citizens being searched by customs officers as they brandt; below, Assistant Secretary Lowman and Prohibition Administrator Campbell.

The hundreds had gone down there to see off friends who were sailing on the "De France." As they started home, they were subjected to a most surprising pocket-slapping.
The purpose was to discover bottles of liquor, if any, so Acting Port Surveyor Conrow indicated.

The purpose was to discover smuggled dope, diamonds, and the like, said Seymour Lowman, at Washington.

BROADWAY APPLAUDS

Neither explanation was especially pleasing to those who had been frisked, perhaps, but to Broadway, where the show's the thing and the liquor supply is secure, the official vaudeville was most zealous.

Not many months ago there was the case of the raid on a night club presided over by Helen Morgan. The raiders hacked the place to pieces, and then carted off the pieces. Later,

Washington ordered them returned,
and charges against Miss Morgan dismissed.
Somebody again had failed to heed the cardinal military principle that all offensives must be carefully synchronized.

IS THAT NICE?

Madison, Wis. — "You 100 per cent Americans who go around defending the flag and the palladium of freedom are just like Uzzar, the gent who held out his hand to steady the ark," says Dr. George Hunt, pastor of the Christ Presbyterian Church. The country and the flag, like the ark, doesn't need steading, according to Dr. Hunt.

Dismantle Congregational Church Organ Which Ac-

The old Steer and Turner pipe or-which has accompanied many famous artists including Madame Schuman Heink, Johanna Gadske, Luella Melus, Lucy Marek and Alice Nielson, is being dismantled to make way for the new Moller organ which will be installed within the next month.

The old organ, installed when the Congregational church was built in 1888, is perhaps the oldest organ in the state. Although it is old
Mr. Bradway, the man who is tear-it down, states that it is in remarkably fine shape. He says that the sterling manufacture of its various parts cannot be duplicated by modern pipe organ manufactures, because of their inability to obtain the necessary woods and other materials to produce tones as mellow and fine as those of the older organs.

The old organ, which has 1945 tone pipes, 19 stops, and two manuals, will be installed in the Evangelical church at Lake Zurich, Ill.
The new organ, which is the first Moller organ in this section of the state was designed by Lavahn Maesch, instructor in theory at the conservatory and organist at the Congregational church. It will have three manuals with echoes, 68 stops, nearly 3000 pipes, and the console will be movable. It is costing approximately $25,000. The building of the organ took six months and the installation will require a month.

Mr. Bradway, the man who is dismantling the old organ, is totally blind, but in spite of his affliction is able to discharge his duties competently.

The committee in charge of the selection of the new organ includes
G. E. Buchanan, Mrs. H. C. Humphrey, Elmer Jennings, Mrs. B. F.
Goodrich, and LaVahn Maesch.

Several streets needing grading were reported by the committee on streets, especially Grove and Water-sts. The council held that the work could be done by the street commissioner under supervision of the street committee and commissioner. IT IS KOHLER

The nomination of Walter Kohler for governor on the Republican ticket means the election of one of the best and finest equipped men in the public service, able, industrious, patient, honest.

Every generation faces new problems, problems that cannot be solved always by the standards of the past. If the people are to get the most out of their government those selected for high authority must not merely be the kind who can plug up leaks when they become evident, for almost anyone can do that, but they must have that altogether too rare quality in our public men, keen judgment and foresight. We do not expect our leaders to be soothsayers or prophets, we expect nothing of the omniscient, but we should insist upon having that high grade of ability and talent that can feel out and expose the weaker parts of our governmental system as they become weak, understand how best to remedy them and thus prevent those breakdowns and miscarriages of justice that are so injurious to all alike. A government thus constituted tends in largest measure to perform the great task for which we set it up. Without that it may limp along, stumbling hither and thither, but never really getting anywhere.

The campaign that Mr. Kohler waged indicates the set character of the man. He started out with the purpose of bringing before the people and discussing decent principles of government in a decent way. All the furious gas attacks of old-time politicians never swerved him an inch from the course he had taken up. The flood of personal abuse aimed at him went by unnoticed. The time-worn attempt to create a mean prejudice against him because he was a successful millionaire manufacturer was without effect.

The people of Wisconsin may very well shake hands with each other, for the vote shows that political chicanery and preaching of class hatred can be carried too far. Voters have gone far to establish the proposition that the only true test for public office is character and capacity and whether the candidate can be of genuine service to the state.

We stress again the fact that Kohler never lost his head. If the reader will closely follow political campaigns he will find from that fact much about the men involved because the race for office is a strain on a man's stamina, a strain weaker characters cannot stand, evidenced by their losing their heads in the last few days or week of a campaign and hurling all sorts of wild and useless charges and epithets against their opponents. Kohler never lost his calm nor his faith that an intelligent people could quickly tell the spurious from the true, could separate the chaff from the grain. That sort of a character can best pilot the ship of state. It generally can be depended upon for that steadfastness of purpose necessary to solve the difficult problems that lay ahead.

The people of Wisconsin have done themselves proud.

EVADING JURY SERVICE

The New York Merchants' association has found that one-half to two-thirds of the citizens drawn for jury service successfully evade it. The association is trying to remedy that situation. A good example of reform work is the decision of the big department store, Macy and company, to pay its employees the full difference between their salaries and their jury fees when they are drawn for jury duty. This will doubtless reconcile many to such service when they would feel otherwise that they could not afford it.

Jury pay ought to be higher. But as long as jury fees represent the financial standards of a generation or two ago, any business institution able to do what this firm does is performing a fine public service.

Still more important, however, than cash compensation is the cultivation of a psychology which will regard jury service as a public duty. Every form of encouragement promotes that state of mind.

BEAUTIFUL RAILWAYS

The Chicago & Northwestern railroad is preserving and encouraging the wild flowers along its right of way. Acting under orders, the men who cut the weeds and grass along the sides of the track take care to cut only the objectionable sorts, so that the flowers will bloom and spread.

It is but a step from this practice to planting flowers and shrubs along the right of way, as some eastern railroads are doing. The Long Island railroad has adorned some of its unsightly cuts with climbing roses. The New Haven has done a good deal along the same line. The conservation of wild flowers, however, is a more natural policy, and probably easier and less expensive.

Sooner or later, travel on American railways will be not only comfortable but beautiful. That is, provided the billboards are kept within bounds. So far, they continue to be the most prevalent adornment.

SAVING ANTIQUES

Henry Ford's attempt to buy an old pipe organ in a church at Portsmouth, R. I., and move it away, is opposed by many prominent Rhode Islanders. The organ is not worth much as a musical instrument. It has been used nearly 200 years. But it is naturally valued as a historic relic. The tradition is that it was given to Trinity Church, Newport in 1733, by George Berkeley, Lord Bishop of Cloyne, and was moved about a century ago to its present home.

Other efforts made by Mr. Ford in America and abroad, to buy antique objects and buildings, are likewise meeting with resistance. Old stuff, more and more, changes from junk to antiques. Those who have known and loved it, or who merely feel the pull of local pride, object to having it uprooted.

That is a proper attitude, and one well enough suited to modern conditions. Museums and collections are all right, but not so necessary as they used to be. Travel is so much easier, people can go to see exhibits in their natural setting.

SCHOLARS IN POLITICS

Dr. Graham Wallas, English "philosopher in politics," tells Americans there is a place in that sphere for high-brows, and thinks we might use more of them in the United States.

American students of politics reply that that is difficult because our voters are suspicious of experts. Thus the first chance they had in New York and Chicago, they turned out of office men noted for their training and skill as public administrators.

There is less of this antagonistic spirit, however, than there was a few years ago. A nation respecting experts in business and professional life begins to appreciate them in political life. The difficulty may be less with the people than with the experts. Politics is one of the "human sciences." It requires unusual humanity in a public man, as well as unusual knowledge. Heart is as important as brain. The politician or statesman accomplishes his work only through people. To succeed in a big way, he must be not only a philosopher and expert but a good fellow, commanding personal loyalty. Such a combination is rare.

We don't know whether Dr. Ward's new fifty-volume book aimed at the mistakes of our times mentions it or not, but the book certainly has made an error of omission if the age isn't described as that period in which a young lady may be allowed out into the August heat without stockings but never without furs.

Dr. William Bowie of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey says the earth is cooling off one degree Centigrade every 150,000 years. Thus, the earth will be two degrees Fahrenheit cooler in the year 16,001,928 A. D. Gosh, we hardly can wait!

Nearly a billion and a half is being spent on the roads of the United States this year, but we haven't noticed any and for the prosecution of the fellows who take their hot-wheels at 10 miles an hour, and straight down the middle.

We're not skeptics, but we're beginning to doubt just a little if there's any great load of news in the usual Monday story headed "Coolidge Spends Quiet Sunday."

Emil Ludwig, in his impressions of America, views success, and not money, as the ideal. The professor must have missed seeing some of our better class cigaret ads.

A stalk of corn from which 10 ears sprouted was exhibited in Philadelphia grocery the other day. Too late, however, for honorable mention in Hoover's acceptance speech.

SIGNS OF DROUGHT APPROACHING
Here are some very good "directions to mothers," which Dr. Joseph K. Calvin gives to mothers of children with the bed wetting habit:

Directions to Mothers

Stop all punishments or any action that will arouse fear in connection with the habit.

Stop all arguing and rowing and dominating unreasonably—the question of the use of the toilet should not be a battleground of discipline.

Stop all displays of emotional concern and substitute an indifferent attitude.

Treat mishaps in a casual and kindly way so as not to concentrate the child's mind on the fault and dwell on it.

Stimulate interest in success by much praise and rewards for dry nights—avoid mention of wet nights.

Never express lack of faith in the child.

Keep a gold star calendar of dry nights only.

Stop "babbling" the child by overaffection.

Never mention to the child that he has "weak" kidneys or "weak" bladder or that he will "out-grow" the habit in later years.

General Rules

1.—Restrict fluid (milk, water, soup, etc.) after 4 p. m. The evening meal should be light and dry, that is, cereal or custard or junket, bread, jelly, fruit, etc. Avoid coffee, tea, salt, pepper and condiments at all meals. Especially avoid salt and sweets after 4 p. m. as these excite thirst.

2.—Empty the bladder before retiring, and again at 10 or 11 p. m. Be certain that the child urinates freely at these times.

3.—Rest: An afternoon nap if possible; no excitement after 5 p. m., such as exercise, reciting, competitive games, loud laughter, movies or exciting radio programs. The child should sit down and play quietly after 5 p. m. The child should not become too fatigued before retiring and should retire early. Elevating the foot of the bed six inches is advisable.

Besides the direction that "weak" kidneys or bladder should never be mentioned to the child (or to anyone else, for neither kidneys nor bladder are "weak" in children with the bed wetting habit), it might be well for parents, grandmothers, and other relatives to heed another important rule, namely, never refer to the bed wetting at all, that is, let it be a secret known only to the child and mother, nurse or guardian.

Nothing is more disastrous to the prospects of correction of the habit than embarrassment of the child. No normal child with the bed wetting habit can help feeling embarrassed and it is as unwise as it is unkind to recognize that it occurs at all.

I have noticed in too many of the letters from persons seeking advice about the correction of the bed wetting habit, an unsympathetic attitude. Indeed, in 20 per cent of these requests does not even acknowledge relationship with the child, and when anyone who is presumably responsible takes that attitude there is nothing I can do, or nothing I will do. I have no instructions or advice to give indiscriminately about this misfortune of childhood. Let me know what you seek advice bear this in mind when writing to me. Don't ask me such foolish questions as "What can be done with a child that wets the bed?" The only answer I would make for that is "Let the child's guardian, or anyone who will acknowledge relationship with the child, write me."

The entire feud up with this mean attitude of some parents toward their own children. If such parents are not too dumb they ought to be able to understand that this bed wetting habit is nothing shameful and it happens in the best families.

Now, then, if your household is divided on the wet and dry issue, tell me just how you stand. Otherwise, never mind—I am not interested in impersonal statistics.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

In Reply to Same We Beg to Snicker

It has been brought to my attention by a friend that an article in reference to the Parkinson disease appeared in your esteemed paper, recently. I wish to advise that I would be much interested in getting any further information from you in regard to this disease. A well known specialist. Trusting that it may be favored with a reply at your earliest convenience.

(G. E. A.)

Answer—Shucks, friend, why all the complete letter writing language? As I carefully explained in the article about Parkinson's affection, I can give the method of treatment to physicians only. If you physicians desire the information I'll be glad to comply. Meanwhile, I am gratified to observe that you didn't use the word "same" as a pronoun.

LOOKING BACKWARD

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Thursday, Sept. 10, 1903

While farmers mourned over the damage done to the potato crop by the wet weather, they were pleased over the prospects of a good yield of corn. If no frost occurred in the following days it was expected that the crop would be the best in three years.

Miss Anna Novship and George Hoh, both of Greenville, were married at Zion's Lutheran church; the previous afternoon.

John Lettier, who had been spending a two weeks' vacation with friends at Black Creek had returned home and was to resume his duties at the post office the following day.

George Woelz returned that morning from a six weeks' trip through the west and California.

C. S. Dickinson had returned from Montana where he had spent the previous several weeks on a hunting expedition.

Otto Zuehlke left for Milwaukee the previous night to attend the state fair.

Lillian Shell and Frank Webb, both of this city were married the previous day. They were to make their home in Appleton.

The Rebels entertained the Odd Fellows the previous night at a box social.

TEN YEARS AGO

Thursday, Sept. 5, 1918

Nearly a million railway employees of the lower pay class were granted raises in pay that day by the railroad administration.

The main German forces had retreated across the Aisne and American artillery was supporting the pursuit of the Germans.

Miss Mary Krueger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Krueger and Frank Burmeister announced their marriage the previous day. It occurred on Aug. 13.

Mrs. William Thompson was to entertain the ladies of the J. T. Reeve circle, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic of a game social at her home the following Friday afternoon.

Instead of the usual gymnasium work for boys of the junior and senior classes at high school, military training was substituted. A drill in which all classes took part was held over a week. Several students had enrolled in the French class at the high school, making two classes necessary.

The total enrollment at the high school was 542 that day. It was the fifth day of school.

VALUABLE DEPARTMENT COLLECTIONS

Washington, D. C.—Although the idea has been frequently broached, the National Archives is lacking in a national hall of archives with the result that documents and articles of profound interest remain scattered and largely unknown. It is now thought likely, however, that with the completion of the several new department buildings, the preparations for which have been begun, there will be a general overhauling of the collections. At such time it is expected that the articles will be placed on public exhibition.

These collections have resulted from the experiences of the various Departments. Perhaps the one of greatest national interest is in the hands of the War Department. It consists of quite a substantial number of cards bearing the names of famous officers of the Revolution and the Civil War. These signatures are subscribed to the oath of allegiance. The cards themselves were made out by General Washington during the bitter winter when the army was encamped at Valley Forge. General Washington framed the oath and required all of his officers to subscribe to it. The cards constituted a sort of index to the commissioned personnel of the Revolutionary forces.

It is interesting to note that one of the cards bears the signature of General Benedict Arnold, who later turned traitor and went to England, serving in the British army.

The existence of this collection of cards is known to but few people and is very jealously guarded by War Department officials. Indeed, the National Museum and the Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress would both like to have the cards but the War Department takes the position that as they are military records they belong in the War Department files.

DECORATIONS AND GIFTS FILED AWAY

Another collection of great interest is in possession of the State Department. It is a more miscellaneous assortment, containing, in fact, such things as garments, oil paintings, foreign decorations, gold watches, and many others. The Constitution of the United States forbids officials of the United States Government to accept gifts from foreign princes or states. This was written into the Constitution because, the republic being in its infancy, the new nation just having wrenched free from monarchical rule, it was feared something like bribery might be attempted by old world rulers in an effort to subvert the upstart republicans.

In consequence no gift may be accepted save with the express consent of Congress. American naval captains, members of the Coast Guard and life saving services, and other men in the pay of the United States have effected many rescues fore it had been in the custody of the State Department.

A collection of more recent date is in possession of the United States Shipping Board. During the War the Board trained and put at work some six hundred supercargoes. A special school was established and there the young men were given an intensive course in the duties of supercargo. Then set forth in charge of the loads of Shipping Board vessels.

They sailed the seven seas and were known in every port. They drew up detailed reports of their observations. These included charts of the various harbors visited with elaborate notes concerning physical characteristics as well as commercial data.

The importance of having safe storage for government records was forcibly brought to the authorities some years ago. The Department of Justice was prosecuting an anti-trust suit against the New York, New Haven, and Hartford Railroad. Much evidence had been collected in the course of a protracted investigation. It was stored in the old Department building, a remodeled residence building, once the home of Senator McMillan. As the time came for the use of the documents it was discovered that their usefulness had been almost wholly destroyed. It had nibbled the various papers until they were scarcely decipherable.

These are not on view to the public but in all probability they will be placed in the new building. So gradual has been the accumulation that no one really knows just how many valuable things are tucked away in the strange lofts of the State Department.

VALUABLE TREASURY DOCUMENTS

Not long ago, purely by accident some very valuable documents were discovered in a loft of the Old Treasury. There were two invaluable finds. One consisted of a file of correspondence between Andrew Jackson and Secretary of the Treasury Lane. It was, of course, all written in long hand. Some letters were written in Jackson's own hand and others had been written by an amanuensis, being merely signed by Jackson. The letters dealt with the famous bank of the United States controversy, one of the principal issues of Jackson's Presidency.

The other discovery was an annual report of Albert Gallatin who was Secretary of the Treasury during the War of 1812. Mr. Gallatin was a very old man. His annual report, however, was written in his own hand, a very shaky one. It dealt with the national finances. The few pages this report covers compares with the substantial volume required to print current annual reports of Secretaries of the Treasury much as the small sums of money handled by the Treasury in those days compares with the billions in hand. Secretary Mellon deals.

These documents were turned over to the Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress where they are expected to public view.

It was remembered that only recently was the original Declaration of Independence enshrined in a specially constructed glass case in the Library of Congress. There-

OUR TREES

THE RED GUM
Although red gum has always been prized for the brilliancy of its autumnal tints, its star-shaped leaves, which rival the color of the maple and the dogwood, it was considered practically worthless as a wood until recently.

Methods of seasoning the wood have been found and red gum now ranks seventh as a lumber product. It is used principally for interior finish, furniture, boxes and other light work.

Beautifully figured red gumwood with ornate patterns is prized for decorative paneling and for furniture. Considerable gumwood is sent abroad where it is manufactured into furniture which often finds its way back to America under the name "satin walnut" and sometimes as "Caucasian walnut."

As a slack coarpage wood red gum ranks next to elm, the leading wood for this purpose. As a veneer wood it leads all others in quantity.

Red gum is frequently called "sweet gum," the name originating doubtless from the sweetish gummy substance obtained from the tree.

The gum is much in demand by the manufacturers of varnishes, dyes, adhesives and pharmaceutical preparations. Its properties and composition are similar to those of oriental storax obtained from a tree which grows in Asia Minor.

The range of red gum is from southwestern Connecticut westward to Kansas and southward to Florida and Texas. The commercial range is largely confined to the most lands of the lower Ohio and Mississippi basins and to the lowlands of the southeastern coast. Red gum grows to a large size. Average mature trees have a diameter of from one and one-half to three feet and a height of 80 to 120 feet.

RELIGIOUS MEETING OF YOUNG PEOPLE HAS VARIED PROGRAM

Sessions Will Be Interspersed With Dancing, Golfing and Swimming

Racine — (AP) — Religious meetings during which such entertainment as dancing, golf and swimming is interspersed were started here to be continued for three days.

The meeting is that of the Episcopal Young People's association from Wisconsin and Illinois. It is scheduled to bring forth for frank discussion the difficult problem of modern youth and the church.

This, the fifth annual conference of the association, will bring the modern entertainments that are calculated to attract the youthful visitors while they are engaged in serious consideration of the church problems.

Modern interpretation of religion and the church in the light of recent developments among young people will be given the group by the Rev. LeRoy Burroughs, Episcopal chaplain at Iowa State College, Ames, who for several years has devoted himself especially to work with youth. Dr. George Craig Stewart of Evanston, Ill., director of Episcopal activities at Northwestern University, is another speaker-teacher.

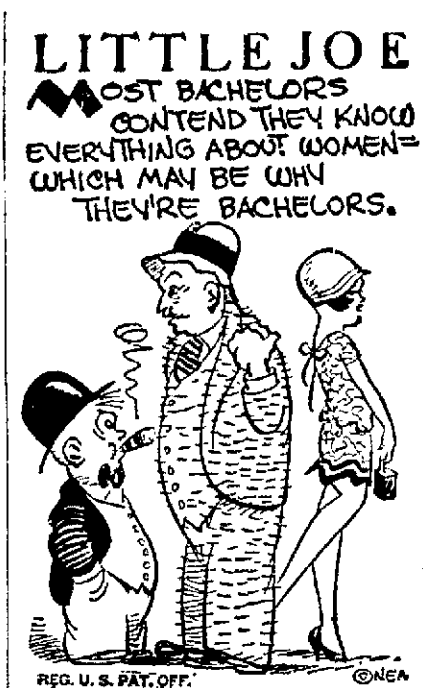

The Rev. James Madison Johnson, vicar of St. John's church, River Forest, Ill., is listed as chaplain of the conference and will give daily inspirational addresses. The Rev. Walter C. Bihler of Christ church, River Forest, Ill., a former student at Oxford, England, will present his views to the youth.

Recreation forms an important part of the program for the young people. Tennis and golf tournaments are on schedule and times will be allotted to swimming, musical entertainment and dancing.

The purpose of the conference, according to David E. Evans of Chicago, president of the association, is primarily to develop leaders among the youth for future church endeavors.

"We must appreciate the fact that the field of young people's work is limited to a comparatively short period of years, a period in which lifelong interest in Christian principles can be established if young people are given an opportunity to ascertain for themselves the manner in which the church fits into their lives and interests," said Mr. Evans today. "The success of our work lies not so much in present accomplishments as in the development of leaders who will be capable of accepting more definite responsibilities in after years."

More than 100 young people, chiefly leaders in their own parties, are expected.

Raise Boys
First And

ONE day Auntie came to call. Auntie had no children but she had a fine house, a fine lawn, shrubbery and flowers.

She looked at the brown patches made not altogether by the August sun. Dozens of feet, shod and otherwise, had raced over that forlorn lawn all summer. It was baked hard with parades, prisoner's base, ball games and sundry.

She shook her marcelled head and walked into the house where apple dumplings were boiling for lunch. She sniffed the aroma of steaming apples with distaste, looked at the worn hall-and-stair carpet, peeped into the living room with its worn, nondescript chair covers, faded curtains and well-thumbed magazines. Then, stern and determined, she mounted the stairs to her sister's room. The hum of the electric machine stopped and Buddy's trousers sprawled, as Buddy's mother turned around from her sewing.

"Hello, Lil!"

"Lil" popped down on the edge of the bed, something she would not have permitted in her own house, but then her sister's bed was all sags and bulges. Sitting on it could not hurt it.

"Don't you ever stop?" she panted. "Your house is as hot as Hades and I should think you could have something cooler than dumplings for lunch. Of all things at this time of year."

"I can't have salad for the boys. They want something filling—besides they love them so and they coax for them today so I promised. Come on down; they're cooked by this time and I have the table all set."

"I've had my lunch," said Auntie with distaste. Then suddenly, "I don't see how you stand this place. The house is bad enough but the outside's a fright. You scarcely have a blade of grass left and the steps are worn to the wood. Not a drop of paint. Surely the children could stay out back or play on the walk. I wouldn't let them abuse things. Your lawn is an eye-sore—and that flower bed you started, well, it's just nothing. I'd have more pride."

Buddy's mother released Buddy's trousers and disconnected the cord of the machine from the wall socket.

"I'll tell you how it is, Lil," she said, slowly pushing the machine back to its place and closing the lid. "Just now I'm raising boys. A little later on I'll raise grass."

Chinese Girl Interne

Dr. Amy Shu Hua Ling, a graduate of Western Reserve university, Cleveland, O., is serving her internship in a Pittsburgh, Pa., hospital before returning to her native China.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—(AP)—Far from the turbulent area where her countrymen are engaged in conflict, Dr. Amy Shu Hua Ling of Peking has begun her year's interne service in the West Penn hospital here.

Looking every bit like a young American woman, Dr. Ling hopes eventually to return to her own country to devote her life to the care of sick women and children. She is a graduate of Western Reserve university, Cleveland, O.

Dr. Ling first became interested in medicine during her freshman year at the University of Peking where she learned English.

"I did considerable work for the school annuals, and for Peking newspapers, gradually I came to feel that medicine was the greatest thing in the world. To think that you can help people in their physical sufferings, that is so nice."

"I came to America because I wanted to get the best education that is offered in the world of medicine."

Two cups left-over chopped meat, 1 cup chopped raw carrots, 1 cup chopped raw potatoes, 2 onions, salt and pepper, 1 cup milk, 1/4 cup buttered bread crumbs.

Put meat and vegetables, in including onion through food chopper. Mix thoroughly and season with salt and pepper. Put into a well-buttered baking dish and pour milk over. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake one hour in a slow oven. Serve from baking dish.

FUR BELTS

CHENILLE LACE MAKES ENTRY IN WINTER STYLES

Paris—(AP)—Velvet reaches its most subtle form in winter fashions now being shown here, in chenille lace, which is lace of heavy body with figures worked in velvet thread.

Whole evening dresses, and sometimes jackets to match, are made of the chenille lace. One famous dressmaker uses only dot forms of chenille lace, with circular designs worked out in hybrid little balls of chenille of graduated sizes.

married and has a jealous wife. I wish she'd quit jabbing me with questions and let me see Mr. Harvey."

At last Crystal made her demand aloud: "Please, Miss Manley, won't you let me talk with Mr. Harvey?"

"Mr. Harvey leaves all applications for stenographic positions to me," Miss Manley answered curtly. "But I'll see if he wants to talk with you. I'm very much afraid, however, that there is no opening at present. Just a minute."

"The 'just a minute' stretched out into five, ten, fifteen. Crystal finding herself alone, crossed and uncrossed her legs, and her briefcase lay on the floor beside her. She pulled it slightly higher so that the rounded, silken knee-caps showed. Snapping open her vanity case, she carefully made up her face anew, although it was already thickly coated with rouge and powder.

Crystal was flapping her powder puff against her nose for the second time when Miss Manley re-entered the room.

"Mr. Harvey is very sorry, Miss Hathaway, but there is no opening for a stenographer at present," she said flatly, and Crystal was sure that her slate-gray eyes behind the thick lenses glinted with malicious triumph.

"But, oh, I did want to see Mr. Harvey himself," Crystal protested. "Mr. Harvey saw you," Miss Manley retorted drily. "He never considers an applicant until he has observed her, when she thinks herself alone."

"Oh!" Crystal cried, the hot blood of shame and anger staining her neck and face. "He spied on me! I can't hear of anything so contemptible! You can tell your Mr. Harvey for me that I wouldn't work for him if he paid me a hundred dollars a week!"

A minute later, as she waited for the elevator, her eyes hot with tears, she tore up the other two letters that Bob Hathaway had given her.

ALL take a hot dog," Copy cried. A great big fat one then was spied. "Oh, that's the one I want," said he. "But right inside a bun. To eat it will be lots of fun. I'll eat this one, and then perhaps another when I'm through."

"Now, just a minute," Copy said. "Please get this fat right through your head. Twill cost you just ten cents before I give you food to eat." Then Scooty cried, "Well, fix up there. I've thirty cents, as you can see. To show you I am generous, this food will be my treat."

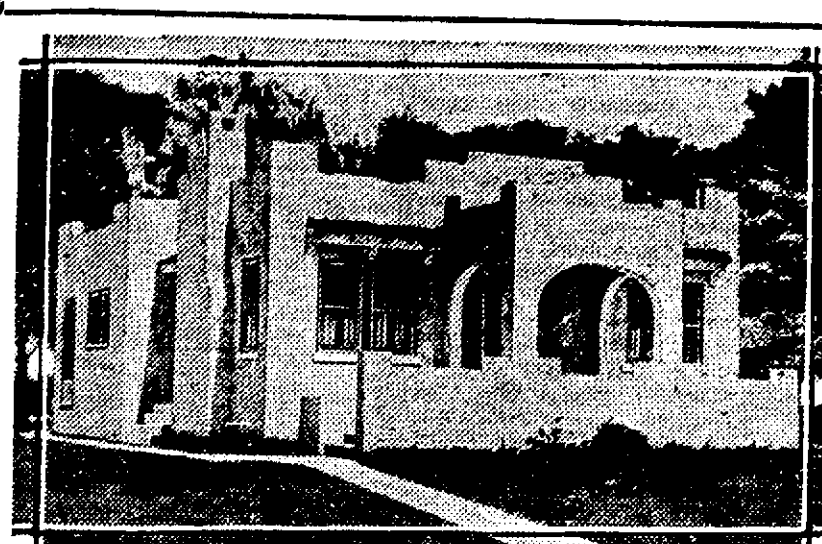

"Course Copy cried, 'Hurrah for you.' And Carry added, 'Yep. Here too.' So Copy fixed three hot dogs, and the Tinies had a feast. "My goodness, these are very good," said Scooty. "I am sure I could eat more." And Copy answered, "Fine! My sales will be increased."

Then Copy jumped and cried "next story!"

A secret is the shortest distance between two women.

Rio Verda Offers Boom

THE RIO VERDA, with its colored stucco, tiled roof and square lines, catches much of the romance of the old Spanish architecture which inspired it.

This is the house for a big, level piece of land that may have trees in the background, but none across the front. For the Rio Verda suggests the bare stretches of hot countries, and it is at home where vegetation is sparse.

For comfort, one could search far from a home that affords one such ample room. Three bed rooms are included in its plan, and none of them small.

The living room has its fireplace for cool evenings, its windows on two sides for sunny days. A pleasant feature is the side terrace opening off the dining room.

This home was built for living as well as romantic thoughts. The kitchen proves that. Here you find everything to save steps, time and energy: built-in refrigerator, ironing board, cabinet, broom closet and range. And, of course, a convenient breakfast nook that looks out on the palm trees or the distant brown hills in the rear.

The price of the Rio Verda is from $6000 to $7000.

For further information, please write the Standard Homes Bureau, Colorado Building, Washington, D. C.

With French dressing to which a little grated Roquefort cheese has been added.

CLEANING DRAIN BOARD

Rub the drain board with the inside of lemon peel, sprinkle with a cleansing powder and let stand a while before scrubbing clean. The result is a dazzling whiteness.

MAPLE SAUCE

Nothing makes a more delicious sauce for cup custard or bread or rice pudding than hot maple syrup. Let it boil a little and serve as piping hot as possible.

Good arrangement of furniture is not a matter of whim or fancy. Davenport, desks, bookcases, large tables—in short, the large pieces of the room never should be set on the bias. Rugs always should be laid across the room. Years ago we had the idea that it made a room "cozy" to pull the furniture across the corners. It doesn't it only makes it fussy, and it wastes space dreadfully.

A rectangular room is easier to arrange than a square one.

Every room should have a focal center. A fireplace is a natural center. You can feel it pulling the entire room toward it. Where there is no fireplace, a long center wall, or a group of windows, or the space between two windows will serve the same purpose. Naturally it will be some center space from which the rest of the room seems to radiate. With this established, the furniture should be arranged toward it. It will help in arranging it you remember that chairs should not have to be moved around when guests come in order to make people comfortable. They should be already in the half circle arrangement that is so friendly and inviting.

What shall the living room rug be? Plain carpet entirely covering the floor will make a small room seem larger. If a plain rug is used, it should pretty well cover the floor. Of plain carpet material, chenille is the aristocrat. It comes in wide width and lovely colors. Wilton is the next choice. When one can afford it there is nothing like a fine Oriental, but better any day an honest domestic than a shoddy Oriental.

CHOOSING COLOR SCHEME

The color scheme may be taken from the chintz at the windows, from a picture or from some bright upholstery. All decoration is a balancing of picture surfaces against plain ones, with stripes and checks and the like to hold them together. We may decide whether we want the windows, the floor or the upholstery to be pictures, and then we will make everything else harmonize. In a busy living room with many plain rich surfaces every where in the draperies, the rug, the upholstery and chairs as one. A putty color which is slightly darker than the ivory we have used so much gives a rich background. Dust or no dust, the floor should be stained a medium walnut color. A light floor kills a room.

A real living room is never finished. Year by year, it is growing. Sometimes we must wait months to find just the picture or vase we have wanted for a certain space. Only in this way can we achieve a truly "joy-of living" room.

Among the accessories are noticed velvet belts studded with brilliants.

Razed Along With Other
Removal Work

Kaukauna—Workmen of the Wisconsin Power company of Green Bay are busy removing the old tracks of the Kaukauna Green Bay line that was discontinued last week. At present they are removing the tracks from the waiting station to the center of the street. A large piece of pavement has been removed. The street will be graded down so as to be level with the rest of the street. When the pavement was constructed, there was a rise where the tracks turned off of Lawe-st to the turn switch in the rear of the waiting room. This pavement has been removed with the tracks, and new pavement will be laid there. As soon as the workmen have completed the work near the waiting station they will start removing the tracks on the end of Lawe-st near Holy Cross cemetery so the McCarty Construction company will be able to put in concrete there. The old waiting station is being removed. The Wisconsin Michigan Power company is operating busses between Appleton and Green Bay but no arrangements have been made for a new waiting station.

Hours at Next Meeting
Monday Evening

Kaukauna—A Woman Tenderfoot in Egypt, by Grace Thompson, a book donated to the library by a local person, was put on the shelf this week. It is a good book of description, according to Miss Kathryn Hornbrook, librarian. It is the story of the author's trip through Egypt, describing the country the way it appeared to her with its ancient wonders that tell of a history of long ages.

Several new books on grammar, composition, and home economics were also put on the shelves this week, and will be useful to students of upper grades. A number of children's books have been received by the library and may be drawn.

The library will be open this Saturday evening from 7 to 9 o'clock. These are the fall and winter hours that were followed last year. At a meeting of the library board next Monday evening in the library, the fall and winter hours will be determined for this year. STAGE And SCREEN

MARION DAVIES GAINS DISTINCTION

"The Cardboard Lover" is one of the gayest and most sprightly comedies that ever came from the Camera Coast. This picture coming to the Appleton Theatre Friday, Saturday and Sunday is Marion Davies at her very best, directed by Robert Z. Leonard, at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, after an adaptation from a famous French farce. What in the way of light comedy could be better than that?

Monte Carlo, with its throngs of beautiful women, its fascinating casinos and its atmosphere of romance, serves as a background for the comedy situations worked out by the leading comedienne of the screen. It never has served as the locale of a better picture, and other Monte Carlo pictures have been as common as flies around a sugar bowl.

The romantic story opens with the arrival of a young American girl, as played by Miss Davies, at Monte Carlo with a group of other college girls in a Cook's Tour party. As the world's gambling capital she meets Nils Asther, a tennis champion, in the midst of an affair with a noted siren, played by Jetta Goudal. Although Asther knows of his mistress' unfaithfulness, he is unable to tear himself away from her.

Sally Baxter, the American girl, pursues the tennis champion for his autograph. In her effort to get his signature she loses ten thousand francs to him at Baccarat. Asther seizes on her indebtedness as an excuse to make her pose as his sweetheart, to keep the enchantress at a distance until he can free himself of her hold on him.

With such a situation, and Miss Davies in the star part, complications naturally come thick and fast. The film moves rapidly as first one woman and then the other gains a temporary advantage over the other. A most amusing battle of wits results.

It is unfair to compare a motion picture with a stage play, but "The Cardboard Lover" certainly equals in comedy to the successful farce, in which Jeanne Eagels starred on Broadway, from which the screen picture takes its name. Miss Davies, the director and the scenarist have done a rarely pleasing job.

With Miss Davies in the lead it is usually easy to forget the rest of the cast, but not in this picture. The rest of the cast, namely, Nils Asther, Jetta Goudal, who displays an unexpected sense of comedy; Tena Holtz and Andre de Sargula are more than excellent.

"The Cardboard Lover" is a treat for those whose digestion can stand two hours of steady laughter, with a bit of pathos now and again to season the comedy.

FIRST RECEIPTS FROM GOLF COURSE DEPOSITED

More than $236 was deposited by Fred E. Bachman, city treasurer, Wednesday morning in an Appleton bank, but depositing money is a common thing with the treasurer. However, there was something a bit more interesting in Wednesday's deposit insofar as the city's new municipal golf course. The proceeds were the result of the first three day's play. Fred has hinted he might start a golf course of his own if it will pay such large returns.

Lectures were given by Dr. Palmer, other members of the faculty and speakers from various parts of the country on advances made in the profession the last few years. About 1,500 chiropractors from the United States, Canada and Mexico were present.

If you drove a car costing $3,000..you would find the same vital elements of quality

The only Essex point in common with cars in its price field —is price. An examination of our Special Chassis Display will give you some astonishing and impressive comparisons that you will not forget. Essex quality, fine appearance and high manufacturing practice rightly classify it with those costly cars which use the best known fine car methods.

For every important item in Essex construction you must go to these costly cars to find comparison. Like the $3,000 cars Essex uses roller tappet bearings. It uses Timken tapered wheel bearings. It uses worm-and-gear type steering. It uses a hard-rubber steering wheel, with steel core, identical with the wheel used on the highest priced cars. Like the $3,000 cars Essex uses five frame cross members for rigidity. Like them it fully balances all running parts for smooth, long-lasting operation.

The four-wheel brakes used on the Essex Super-Six are the same enclosed and protected type used on costliest cars, and assure the maximum brake safety. They typify the costly car way Essex is built throughout — and you can verify this detail by detail, inside and out, by comparison first with costly cars—and then with cars in the Essex price class.

Come see the most important part of your Essex and the way it is built in this special chassis display. It will explain why Essex is the largest selling "Six" in the history of the industry.

MILWAUKEE WINS TWO GAMES FROM ST. PAUL, 7-1 5-4

Have Won 9 Straight In Drive For Flag Millers Trim Blues

Yankees Continue to Coast Ahead of Athletics in American Race

Chicago—(AP)—Surfing by a winning streak of nine straight games, eight of which have been chalked up in foreign fields, Jack Lovell's Milwaukee Brewers have cast a dark cloud over the American association pennant hopes of Minneapolis.

While the Millers and Indians won their games against Kansas City and Louisville, the Brewers picked up a half game on them by trimming St. Paul in both ends of a doubleheader, 7-1 and 5-4.

Thursday the Sox won but two games from the top and virtually tied with Indianapolis for second place.

In the first game Wednesday, Ed dieman of the Brewers pitched one of the best games in the circuit this season, holding the Saints to three hits, in the second they won when Morehart committed an error enabling pick to advance to third from where he scored on an infield put-out.

The Minneapolis-Kansas City game was a slugfest with the Millers getting more hits and runs and winning, 10-6. The defeat just about ruined Kansas City pennant prospects.

Leverett limited Louisville to four scattered hits as Indianapolis coopered, 10-1.

Columbus and Toledo had an off-schedule date.

The Athletics, it seems, stand in imminent need of help again, even though the obliging Yankees did what they could to help by dividing a pair with the Senators at the Ruppert Stadium Wednesday. If the champions win two of their remaining three with Washington, which seems reasonable, the Mackmen cannot invade the stadium on Sunday in first place even by sweeping their five at Boston. Such a turn of events would send the contenders into their tie series in a virtual tie, with the Yankees holding a per centage advantage.

Although the New York lead Thursday morning remained two games, the A's were in a better position for the simple reason that they trailed by only two games in the losing column.

Sam Jones, who takes every opportunity to demonstrate that Miller Huggins erred in trading him down the river, held the Yanks to six hits and one run in the opening clash Wednesday while his mates fell upon George Pipgras for enough of each in the seventh to give Sam a neat victory by 3 to 1. Burke and the elongated Weaver were nowhere nearly so effective in the second skirmish and Fred Heimach registered an 8 to 3 win.

In a battle of the lower depths, the Tigers turned on the White Sox to win 10 to 2 after the Sox had maltreated the Bengals in a most shameful manner through all the early games of the series. Other clubs in the American league were unscheduled Wednesday.

The Giants cleaned up their 1928 affairs with the Phillies by winning a 14 to 3 decision for Larry Benton at the Baker Bowl, his twenty-third of the season.

The only other activity in the National league Wednesday was at Boston where the down-trodden Braves turned to slap the Robins by 9 to 2 and 7 to 1. Even this dismal finish left Brooklyn with fifteen victories over Boston in twenty-two engagements. The Giants can do no better unless their sweep these four double headers at Braves field next week.

New York—Roberto Roberti, Italy, defeated King Solomon, Panama, (10). Amadeo Grillo, Italy, knocked out Frankie Cavanaugh, Bridgeport, Conn. (3). Harold Tassi, Italy, knocked out Lee Williams, New York, (4).

Four Stars Battle For American Swat Crown

BY BILLY EVANS

This year's batting crown in the American League appears to rest between Goose Goslin of the Senators and the man, at this time likely to be one of several, who can beat him out. Either Lou Gehrig of the Yankees, Heinie Manush of the Browns or Al Simmons of the Athletics may be that man.

Goslin seems the man to beat. He has been high in the averages all the year and he seems bent on continuing his healthy hitting. As September opened, Gehrig was right on his heels and Manush was not so far away. Simmons trailed them.

One thing is certain, though. That is, the 1928 title will not go to a Detroit player. Down through the years the Tigers have had quite a monopoly on the hitting honors. In fact, only four times since Ty Cobb first flashed to the top back in 1907 has the loga been won by a player not wearing a Tiger uniform.

This Speaker, George Sisler and Babe Ruth have been the ones to break the rather monotonous Detroit regime. Speaker came through in 1916; Sisler in 1920 and 1922 and Ruth in 1924.

From 1907 to 1915 Cobb showed the way. In 1917-18 and 1919 he returned to the purple heights; in 1921-22-23 and 1927 Harry Heilmann squatted atop the throne with Heinie Manush making the grade in 1926. Thus, across a 21-season span Detroit has produced 17 batting champions, a record without equal in major league circles.

While the Detroit successes have, for the most part, been fairly easy ones, the recall of a pair of exceedingly tight races. One came up in 1919, Cobb and Larry Lajoie, who was

LEGION JUNIORS IN FIGHT FOR TITLE ON WHITE SOX DIAMOND

Chicago—(AP)—A record probably unequaled by any sandlot team has been made by the Wards of Oakland, Calif., who meet Worcester, Mass., in the American legion's "junior world series" at White Sox Park, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

MEN SWIMMERS FAIL TO FINISH MARATHON

Michels of France Taken from Water Six Miles from Finish

Toronto—(AP)—Just what sort of money prize would be paid to George Michel of France for his effort in the Wrigley Marathon of 15 miles was the question uppermost in the minds of swimming devotees and officials here Thursday. The Parisian baker, conqueror of the English channel and second-place man in the second annual 21-mile marathon here last year, was in excellent condition and spirits after having been forced out of the race by the chill of Lake Ontario late Wednesday evening.

Michel, when hauled from the water, was the sole survivor among the 198 starters, and had covered 12 1/2 miles in the rather laborious time of eleven hours and twelve minutes.

The notured French baker-man apparently strove to remain longer in the race than Ernest Vierkotter, German channel victor and champion of the Wrigley marathon here last year.

Vierkotter covered some 12 miles when taken from the water semi-conscious at 6:42 in the afternoon.

Before the start, Roland H. Tegmeyer of Seattle had after the ghost, and shortly afterward Louis I. Mathias of Long Island, N. Y., followed, leaving Michel alone in the icy lake with evening shadows falling.

All three were in bad shape when removed from the water, but all responded to stimulants administered at the hospital improvised in the Canadian National Yacht club near the course.

The impression gained ground among 150,000 spectators on shore that Michel would receive the prize.

An unauthorized statement had gone over radio asserting that the Frenchman would win the moment he passed Vierkotter's mark, but Elwood Hughes, sports director of the Canadian exposition which sponsored the two swims, announced that Michel would not collect the first prize.

The disposition of this money and the $10,000 in secondary rewards would have to be decided by the committee, Mr. Hughes added. He left the impression that something would be paid to the athletes.

CORNERS WIN FIRST GAME FROM FREEDOM

Four Hits and a Walk Bring Four Run Lead in First Inning

The first game of the season between Murphy's Corners and Freedom, ended in a victory for the Corners team, 6 and 2. Pingel and Welch formed the winning battery, while Pocan and Welhouse worked the losers.

The Corners team took a liking to Pocan's slants in the first inning making four hits and a walk count for four runs. Pocan tightened up after the experience and allowed only four hits the rest of the way.

Freedom's runs came in the eighth and ninth innings after several threats. Schommer and Harjes hit for extra bases but the latter was out trying to make a three-bagger out of a two fly wallops. Pingel fanned 11 and allowed 7 hits while Pocan fanned 11 and allowed 8 hits.

Next Sunday the Corners team will journey to Freedom for the second game of the three games series to decide the championship.

Score by innings:
Freedom 0 0 0 0 0 1 1-2
Murphy's 4 0 0 1 0 1 X-6

PREDICT BADGERS WILL LOSE GAMES WITH N. D., PURDUE

Wisconsin Coaches Making Plans to Upset Dope and Cop Hard Games

Madison—The office of head coach Glenn Thistlethwaite, Wisconsin's football tutor, is all business these days, for the Badger squad will be assembled here in ten days to make ready for a playing schedule that would furore the brow of any coach. In just one month the Cardinal eleven will line up on Camp Randall field to meet the famed grid machine of Notre Dame. Not only will Wisconsin tackle Knute Rockne's powerful machine on opening day, but the entire early season schedule looms threatening in the offing.

The Badgers engage Purdue in their first Big Ten game, and on the third Saturday of the season. That contest will be staged before the Boilermakers' homecoming fans at LaFayette. Coach Thistlethwaite, considering this Purdue tussle from all angles, took upon it as the crucial point in the fall campaign. Jimmie Phelan had a great team last fall, defeating Harvard in the east and dropping but two conference tilts. The Boilermakers will be stronger this season, with the mighty Welch touted to become even more of a "pest" than last year. Purdue will be set for Wisconsin on Oct. 20th. No one realizes this more than Coach Thistlethwaite himself.

A double attraction with Carroll College, and North Dakota State is sandwiched in between the Notre Dame and Purdue games. Following this difficult early season assignment the Cardinal team must enter the home stretch with Michigan, Alabama, Chicago, Iowa and Minnesota awaiting them in the order mentioned.

JONES AND FARRELL LOSE TO WALT, GENE

Newton, Mass.—Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen were 1 up on Bobby Jones and Johnny Farrell at the end of their thirty-six hole four ball exhibition Wednesday, at the Woodland Gold course here.

Bobby barely missed evening up the match on the eighteenth green, which he made in 2. The others took 3 to get to the green and after they had holed out in 4 apiece Bobby's eighth putt missed the cup by half an inch and they halved the hole, the match going to Hagen and Sarazen, 1 up.

During the afternoon round Jones and Farrell picked up four holes on 11. In operations. Hagen and Sarazen led by 5 up at the end of the first eighteen holes at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Krueger, son George, Jr., and Miss Anna Severson spent the weekend at Iron Mountain, Mich.

CARDINALS GIVEN MEDAL FOR TAKING BALL TITLE

If you see the Cardinals of the inter-playground softball league and more recently the champions of the city playing with a small medal or a watch fob just make up your mind its medal they won for copping city honors. Ten medals were given the members of the team Tuesday by A. C. Denny, director of play grounds during the summer. The Cardinals beat the legion and Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company teams to take the title.

REDUCE PLAYING FEE AT MUNICIPAL COURSE

Now Charge 35 Cents for Nine Holes and 50 Cents for Half Day

Fees at the Municipal golf course which were 50 cents for 9 holes or a half day's play over the week end and Monday now have been reduced. The 50 cents fee still holds for play for a half day but only 35 cents will be charged for nine holes. Improvements continually are being made on the grounds and many persons are taking advantage of the opportunity to get in a round in the late afternoon. Fifty-five persons played the course Wednesday, about 15 in the morning and 40 in the afternoon.

Persons playing in early morning, before 7 o'clock, have the privilege of starting play immediately and paying the fee at the caddy house at 7 o'clock.

MANY DAIRY COWS NOT FED PROPERLY, AG COLLEGE WARNS

VARIETY OF FEED IS NECESSARY FOR PROTEIN SUPPLY

Roughage Alone Will Not Meet All Requirements for Milk Producing Herd

Madison—(AP)—Wisconsin dairy cows undertook a diet of roughage alone, but the state university college of agriculture has found that some of the Badger milk producers are actually lacking in food, or in certain elements of food.

This fact is published in a booklet on dairy cattle feeding recently revised and made public for free distribution among farmers. The booklet is compiled from a large number of actual herd records gathered by the state college.

The quality of feed reference to protein supply was found to be responsible for one-fifth of the differences in the production of herds. It is comparatively easy to select and prepare rations that meet all requirements of cows, with the aid of the special circular, "Feeding Dairy Cows," published by the University extension division.

The following are the necessities mentioned in the circular if the farmer insists on profit at the pail:

- Use well-bred dairy cows.
- Get rid of unprofitable cows.
- Use well-balanced rations.
- Feed according to weight of cows and milk yield.

Consider the cost of the rations. Keep cows comfortable and contented.

Provide well ventilated stables that furnish an abundance of pure, fresh air.

Supply an abundance of water not colder than that from a deep well. Milk cows regularly and thoroughly.

Follow the practices of the most successful dairymen.

The most desirable roughage for the dairy cow is well cured clover, alfalfa or soybean hay and good corn silage or roots.

Roughage alone, however, good it may be, will not meet all the requirements of a cow producing milk. Coarse, unpalatable roughages that are low in protein will necessitate in feeding a grain mixture including large amounts of wheat bran and oil meal, both of which are relatively high in protein and laxative in effect. Cows yielding milk of high fat percentage will require more concentrates in proportion to the amount of milk they produce than will cows giving milk of low test.

A number of rules are given by the experts which, they say should not be followed blindly but should be guided by the body condition of each cow, as well as by her production, in deciding the amount and kinds of concentrates of feed. Concentrates should be fed sparingly for a few days after freshening. Judgment on the part of the feeder, it is said, is most important at all times.

Through experiments it was pointed out that a mistake is frequently made by overlooking the requirements of cows on pasture. Only when there is an abundance of fresh green grass or its equivalent will pasture provide cows with sufficient feed for proper maintenance and a full production of milk. Dairy reports indicate that sweet clover pasture in a large measure meets the summer requirements of their cows.

Buying and selecting feeds for economical rations is another important point suggested for the farmer who expects large dairy profits. With a knowledge of feeds and their general effect on maintenance and production the dairyman must figure out economical rations to suit his own local conditions. In order to do this it is necessary to know the amount of the various nutrients they require. This information can usually be obtained from the distribution by feed companies.

Vitamins are mysterious substances which have been recently discovered by the nutrition chemists. They are necessary for the health and even the life of stock. But, experts say there is absolutely no need for a dairyman to buy any expensive vitamin preparation for his herd.

Good rations containing plenty of well-cured legume hay, furnish plenty of vitamins for the dairy cow. An excellent and economical ration for milk production prepared by experts follows:

Twelve pounds red clover hay, 36 pounds corn silage, 4.25 pounds ground corn, 1.5 pounds wheat bran and 2.25 pounds of cotton seed meal. Estimated cost given as 27.0.

POULTRY STUDIED MOST BY FARMERS

Information on Dairying, Seeds and Grains Also Much Sought After

Madison—Poultry, dairying, seeds and grains and horticulture are the four most studied subjects in rural Wisconsin, judging from the requests for bulletins and circulars addressed to the College of Agriculture, University of Wisconsin.

Among the 150 letters and cards received daily at the state university requesting farm publications, nearly two-thirds ask for bulletins on these four subjects.

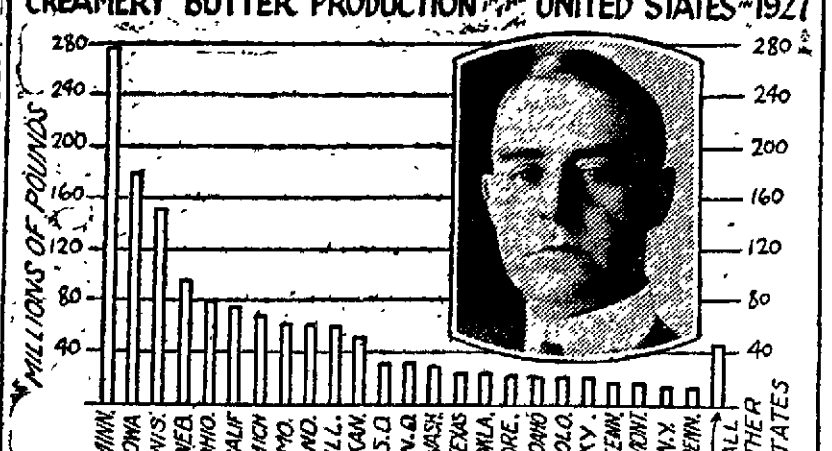

Bulletins, written in the language of the layman and prepared by specialists of the staff of the College of Agriculture, number about 120 and fall into 16 separate fields, covering all phases of farm and home life as it is practiced and lived in Wisconsin. The circulation of individual bulletins ranges from 10,000 to 75,000.

In the fields of grains and seeds, and farm and home life, the man of scientific tongue and agronomy and soils, no less than 21 bulletins are available. Twenty-five deal with animal and poultry husbandry subjects, and 20 separate bulletins are listed for homemakers alone ranging from color in the home to feeding the baby.

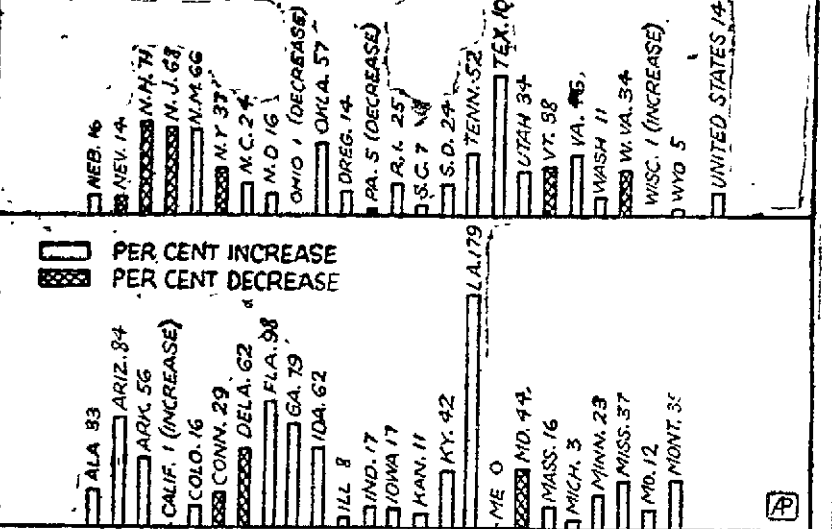

Requests for bulletins are heavy.

Southern States Are Producing More Butter

CREAMERY BUTTER PRODUCTION IN THE UNITED STATES—1927

PER CENT INCREASE AND DECREASE IN CREAMERY BUTTER PRODUCTION IN 1927 COMPARED TO 5-YEAR PERIOD 1922-26

While the northwest produces most of the nation's butter, as shown in the chart above, its rate of increase is falling. The chart below shows production increasing in the south, while gradually decreasing in the east. Roy C. Potts (inset), federal marketing specialist, believes the southern dairy industry will soon assume large economic importance.

Memphis, Tenn.—(AP)—Information collected for the National Dairy Exposition here October 13 to 20 will show production of creamery butter to be gradually diminishing in the northeast, once the center of the industry, and rapidly rising in the south.

Federal figures reveal extraordinary increases in Louisiana, Texas, Florida, Georgia, Arkansas, Tennessee, and Mississippi. With 179 per cent, Louisiana leads all other states in percentage increase of production in 1927. Texas is second with 107 per cent increase in the five-year period, 1922-26. Minnesota, chief butter-producing state of the nation by reason of its 215 million pounds last year, shows an increase of but 29 per cent over the five-year period. Iowa, second in production, had an increase of 17 per cent in 1927, and Wisconsin, last of the "big three," failed to show an increase.

Generally, states of the New England group and other parts of the

FARM FACTS

When a mature apple tree has been top-worked and a new variety of apple grafted to the limbs of the old stock, it often happens that the grafts bear fruit the third season, with a larger crop the fourth. Three and four-year-old grafts should not be allowed to bear heavily because there is danger that the weight of the fruit will break off the graft at the point of union.

The period of incubation of hog cholera has been found to be between three and seven days. In 95 percent of the shots used for federal tests, symptoms of the disease developed on the fourth, fifth, or sixth day after exposure.

A concrete slab 10 feet wide may be used in front of brooder houses. The advantage of this concrete yard is that the chicks are kept off the ground the first few weeks of their lives and are not so likely to acquire the diseases to which young chickens are susceptible. By putting a fence of wire netting around the concrete yard in front of the house, the chickens may be allowed outdoors and thereby benefit from the sunshine which makes them less subject to leg weakness.

It has been found that apples packed in Douglas fir boxes develop "scald" injury because of some substance in the heartwood of the fir. Growers find it better to use western yellow pine, hemlock, and spruce.

None of the remedial mixtures recommended as a control for contagious abortion of cattle has proved of value when the disease was caused by bacillus. If caused by lack of some mineral or vitamin in the feed, benefits may be obtained by changing the diet to a better balance.

Peach growers should be hospitable to ladybird beetles, since they aid materially in checking injurious peach insects by preying on scales, aphids and thrips.

During the school seasons, as teachers in rural schools make use of them in class work, this fall the schools are beginning agricultural courses with the study of weeds, insects, and a few of them have included courses on farm management and livestock.

The Wisconsin publications are sent free to residents of the state, but a small charge is made for bulletins sent out of the state. Numerous requests come from other states and foreign countries. It is through the publications that agricultural leaders in distant countries often learn of new research and experiments completed at the university. Nearly 1,000,000 bulletins and circulars on farm and home subjects are distributed by the university every year.

AMERICAN DAIRY INDUSTRY IS FAR AHEAD OF EUROPE

Dairymen Here Can Learn Little from Foreign Experts, Dunlap Says

Washington—(AP)—Back from the World Dairy Congress in England, R. W. Dunlap, assistant secretary of agriculture, says the American dairy industry has nothing to learn from the Europeans.

This country, he says, is so far in advance that its operations, from the elemental selection of dairy stock on up through the mechanical processes of manufacture and the application of economic knowledge, is not approximated at any point or in any manner.

Mr. Dunlap was chairman of the large American delegation, which represented every phase of the dairy industry and which searched foreign methods for a hint to more efficient and economical production. Only in one respect did the assistant secretary see an advantage for the Europeans. They seemed to get better results from the use of commercial fertilizers. That, however, applied to all crops as well as to the production of dairy feeds. He was deeply impressed by the cooperative marketing system in Holland, which he described as one of the best he ever had seen. Everywhere there was an apathetic attitude toward milk and butter. There was virtually no use of cream, except in the manufacture of cheese. Fluid milk was used to a limited extent in cooking and infrequently formed a part of the diet for small children. He found sanitation to be practiced in various degrees and said slow, disorderly and irregular delivery of milk to patrons was general.

As a result of the congress, particularly American participation, Mr. Dunlap said the industry in England has planned a million-dollar educational campaign to stimulate the use of fluid milk, butter and ice cream. He believes the economic situation abroad is largely responsible for the limited use of these products. Although prices, relatively are the same as in this country, the people, struggling with depressed markets and numerous taxes, have felt they were unable to buy dairy products.

However, Mr. Dunlap believes the campaign and others likely to follow in other countries may eventually open a profitable market abroad for American dairy products. At least, he says, it holds out the possibility that sufficient home demand may be developed to utilize stocks now offered on the American markets in competition with American produce. The United States, he says, is particularly eager that Denmark, which a positive test of his opinion, he sent the head of one of the animals to the state laboratory for examination.

Realization that good pastures may be started comparatively easily in the south, and that an abundance of forage and roughage can be produced, has stimulated interest in dairy development, Potts says. As compared to the eastern states, which in 1926-27 depended on the mills for 40 per cent of their cattle feed, the south can produce butter and milk more cheaply. In almost every section of the south, dairying is attracting as much attention as cotton, and in many cases is a much more certain source of income, specialists say. Seven counties in Mississippi alone are making arrangements for six special trains to carry 7,000 farmers to the dairy exposition.

NORTHERN FLOCKS BEST EGG LAYERS

Single Comb White Leghorns Highest Producers, College Reports

Madison—Farm flocks of northern Wisconsin counties held most of the high records made by tray-nested hens during July, it is shown in a report issued by the poultry husbandry department of the College of Agriculture, University of Wisconsin. Of the 25 high records listed in the summary, no less than 15 were completed on farms in Douglas, Burnett, and Sawyer counties, each of the first two counties being represented by six entries. Price and Winnebago were each credited with two high flocks. Other counties represented among the leaders were Marathon, Rusk, Dane, Jefferson, Waukesha, and Green.

First place for average production among flocks of 100 or more birds went to Leonard Pitski, Douglas county poultryman. His flock averaged 22.85 eggs during the month. H. M. Graves & Son, Jefferson co., was second with 22.36 eggs, and Mrs. C. E. Pruitt, Waukesha co., third, with 22.12 eggs.

Other records of 20 eggs per bird in large flocks were made on the farms of Oscar Westberg, Douglas co.; Viola Lake Farm, Burnett; Edna Clark, Burnett; Carl A. Nordstrom, Price; G. B. McLearn, Winnebago; Charles B. Williams, Douglas; and John A. Hanson, Burnett co.

In the class open to flocks of less than 100 birds, the 45 hens of Mrs. John Templeton, Burnett co., topped the list with an average of 24.27 eggs. Second place was occupied by 62-hen flock of Mrs. C. H. Hyatt, Price co., which averaged 23.81 eggs; and third place by the 40 birds of Spencer Breilinger, Winnebago co., their average being 23.07 eggs.

Single comb white Leghorns were far the leading egg producers in the state; the summary shows. With two exceptions all of the 25 high records made during the month were completed by members of this well known breed.

Ten Men Take Treatment For Rabies Prevention

BY W. F. WINSEY

As an afterglow following the mad dog scare about Greenleaf, the shooting of a mad dog by John Brittnacker, Sr., after it had bitten several of his cattle, and the quarantining of all dogs in the town of Wrightstown by the town board, Godfried Lamers, town of Buchanan, Outagamie co., lost five cows and two calves last week as a result of an infection of rabies and Theo. H. Lamers, his brother, lost six cattle and has another animal in the stable showing the symptoms in their first stages.

Beside this, ten men, most of them neighbors who had assisted in the treatment of the cattle are taking Pasteur treatment to control possible infection, and William Burchtop, a cattle dealer, of the town of Holland, has sent the head of an animal that died under suspicious circumstances to the Hygienic Laboratory, Madison, to have the disease diagnosed by experts.

The men who are being treated for the prevention of rabies are Godfried Lamers, Theo. H. Lamers, Henry Biese, Peter Feldcamp, Richard Lamers, Tony Nelson, Peter Lehergan, William Verbeten, and Clement Verbeten.

Godfried Lamers who lost five cows and two calves last week, as soon as he noticed trouble in his herd, called in two local veterinarians. After some preliminary treatment of the sick cattle, these men became suspicious and advised Mr. Lamers to send the head of one of the dead animals to the Hygienic Laboratory for examination. Before the report of laboratory was received, Dr. L. M. Wright, a state veterinarian, appeared on the scene and diagnosed the disease as rabies. The report of the laboratory verified his diagnosis.

Excepting the loss of his cattle, the report of the laboratory and the assurance of Dr. Wright, Mr. Lamers has no evidence that his cattle were bitten by a mad dog. He had heard of cattle being bitten at Greenleaf, however, and had seen strange dogs on his farm several times.

Fearing later complication, Mr. Lamers shot his own dog and has taken five of a series of fourteen Pasteur treatments.

Theo. H. Lamers after losing his first cow on August 26, has lost five cows, and Tuesday had another in his barn showing symptoms of the same infection.

Mr. Lamers has seen no strange dogs in his herd nor about his farm and has no means of figuring out the origin of the rabies in his herd. As soon as he noticed trouble in his herd, he called the county agent, J. N. Kavanaugh, who advised him to call in local veterinarians as the first move. These men without loss of time got in touch with the state veterinarian who as soon as he arrived pronounced the disease rabies. To get a positive test of his opinion, he sent the head of one of the animals to the state laboratory for examination.

tion. The report of the laboratory confirmed Dr. Wright's decision.

"Animals suspected of being rabid should never be killed but allowed to die," says The State Laboratory of Hygiene. "They should be confined in some room, airy, and well lighted. The proper attention as to food and water should not be forgotten. In such a confinement the animal should be kept two weeks. If at the end of that time no symptoms of rabies have been noticed, the animal may be released and the persons bitten relieved of all anxiety. Death usually occurs in six days if the animal is suffering from rabies at the time the bite was inflicted. In cases in which the symptoms develop, the animal should be allowed to die. The head should be severed from the body, carefully packed in ice and shipped, charges prepaid, to the laboratory. The packing is an important precaution because if ice is omitted the probabilities are that no diagnosis can be made. A good method is to place the head in a small paid which can be easily placed in a large candy box and ice and sawdust packed around it. Full information should be a description of the actions of the animal before death, a statement of the duration of the illness, number of persons bitten or animals bitten, and whether or not the animal was killed or allowed to die. Don't kill animals unless absolutely necessary. Confine in comfortable place for two weeks. Don't injure the head in killing. Don't forget to use plenty of ice in packing. Don't forget to prepay charges."

POWER FARMING WILL REACH PEAK IN 1950

Minneapolis—(AP)—Power farming is agriculture's "newest baby," but by 1950 it will have attained the full strength of manhood, predicted E. A. Stewart, division of agricultural engineering, University of Minnesota, in a paper prepared for the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

"Use of mechanical power in agriculture," he said, "is so modern that still more than two-thirds of the world's total food supply is obtained by man-power only, and less than five percent by mechanical power. Only a baby, power-farming is regarded by many with the indifference that greeted the advent of machine-farming. But, what machine farming has done for this country in the last century will be more than duplicated by power-farming in the twentieth century."

Stewart predicted that power-farming will result in fewer farms and fewer workers but more food. "While our population in 1950 may be six times as great as it was in 1850," he continued, "it is conceivable and probable that the decrease in the number of farm workers, which began in 1910, will continue and that by 1950 no more farm workers will be required to supply food for a population of 150,000,000 than were required in 1850 for a population of 25,000,000."

"LOVE FOR TWO"

by Ruth Dewey Groves
1928 By N. E. A. Service, Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED BERTIE LOU WARD, on the eve of her wedding to ROD BRYER, feels a premonition of trouble when she receives a dagger-like paper knife from LILA MARSH, who has turned Rod down because is not wealthy. But she courageously resolves not to be jealous of Rod's past love affair since his future is in her keeping. She also accidentally overhears one bridesmaid ask another if she thought the bride liked being second choice. The pain in her heart vanishes when Rod whispers "My wife" with a world of adoration in his eyes. They spend an ideal honeymoon in a mountain resort, and Bertie Lou forgets the shadow cast by the ex-wedding until they return and find Lila acting as dictator to her husband because she "knows what Rod likes." The newlyweds settle down in their little home, but too much hospitality upsets their financial budget. This worries Bertie Lou, as does the persistent annoyance of Lila. So she is happy when Rod accepts a position in New York which has been offered him by an old friend, TOM FRASER. But the serpent is not cast out of their Eden yet for when they are leaving, Lila announces her intention of seeing them soon for she is going to visit MOLLY FRASER.

Bertie Lou is anxious to make a good impression so they go to an expensive hotel to live until they can find an apartment. Molly urges her to buy "smart clothes" and Bertie Lou is amazed at the cost of everything. They finally take a three-room apartment at $88 a month. She tells Rod that she believes Molly does not like her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XI

"You're cuckoo," Rod told Bertie Lou, but he said it with a smile. "Of course Molly likes you."

"Of course she doesn't," Bertie Lou returned as stoutly. "But she likes you. And she likes Lila."

Rod looked up quickly. He was trying the laces of his black shoes. There was a queer sound in Bertie Lou's voice.

"I think you're mistaken, honey," he said soberly; "but if Molly isn't friendly toward you we won't go there."

"We must," Bertie Lou said flatly. "We'd be in a terrible fix if you lost your position now. We've spent so much money in just a few days. I've no idea where it's gone to," she added plaintively.

"I have," Rod said decisively. "It's gone for keeping up with New York. But I guess Tom wouldn't care me just because you and Molly failed to hit it off. What's wrong, anyway? You were friendly enough with Molly in Wayville."

"It's a silly thing, but I think she believes I was trying to put something over on her," Bertie Lou replied. "Make her believe my parents are wealthy, or something like that. She's made several allusions to bluffers that make me think she found out after that first day she came here to see me that we never had an income tax return sheet in the house."

Rod was quiet for a moment. Then: "Well," he said gently, "you did throw a bluff by coming to this hotel."

"You know why," Bertie Lou exclaimed. "But I had no idea what it would cost. Anyone can make a mistake."

"But you wouldn't move out the next day like I wanted to."

"No, I wouldn't. Not with Molly Fraser trying to patronize me."

Rod looked at her with a touch of asperity. "And yet you accept invitations to have dinner with me."

"I'm doing it for your sake. But I'm not going out of my way to be agreeable to her. I won't know to anybody. That's why I told you we ought to come home early. If I stay I'm sure to say something to her. I'd never have wanted to come to New York if I'd known Molly expected to make a constant companion of me."

"This is a hot mess. But you brought Lila's name into it a moment ago. What's Molly's liking for her got to do with it?"

Bertie Lou stole a cornerwise glance at him. His face was perfectly impassive. "Well, you know Molly's asked her to come to New York," she said evenly.

"Sure I know it. But can't Molly like you and Lila both?"

Bertie Lou hesitated, then decided to say it. "I think she did, but I don't believe she knew"—her voice dropped—"about you and Lila, until she had us all to dinner at the Arlington."

"There isn't anything to know that would stop her from being friends with either one of you," Rod said quickly.

He wished he hadn't brought Lila's name back into the conversation. There was a note in the way Bertie Lou spoke of her that showed it cost her something to mention his old love affair.

Bertie Lou went on without taking up his remark. "Molly can't help taking sides, I guess. She's awfully fond of Lila. I can tell that by the way she's always saying admiring things about her. And Lila probably admires her just as much. I think Molly's artificial and common, and you know you can't keep from showing people what you think of them in some way or other."

"It's too bad you didn't discover all this before we left Wayville," Rod said, a trifle testily.

"Perhaps I did, about Molly, but it didn't matter to me then."

"Yes, it does. Because, though I'm sure she doesn't like me, she doesn't drop me. I think it's because she likes you. Feels sorry for you, maybe. And I can't drop her. There's always the chance that she'd talk Tom into firing you."

"I'll take that chance. Call her up and say we can't come."

"Don't be foolish, Rod. We haven't enough money for you to be out of work. And we've signed the lease for the apartment, you know. With the first and last month's rent paid in advance."

"We can go back to Wayville."

"And have everyone laughing at us? I shouldn't have said anything to you, but when you get to playing poker with Tom you don't seem to know when to stop."

"Well, maybe when we get settled in the apartment they won't ask us to dinner," Rod consoled her. "And that reminds me. Here's a letter from Dave Barstone. About the furniture, I guess. Read it while I put on my collar."

Bertie Lou hastily ran through the half-filled page. "Oh, Rod," she wailed, "something's gone wrong with the fixing Dave was going to do with the railroad. We won't get our things for weeks!"

"Let me see," Rod took the letter and read it over to himself.

"That's a bad break. But we've got to move just the same, Bertie Lou," he said firmly.

"I know it," she agreed. "But what will we do in that apartment with no furniture? There are such a few things we need to buy. Don't you think we'd better go to a cheaper hotel and wait for our furniture to come?"

"I thought you wouldn't let down your standard," Rod grinned at her. "Anyway it would be throwing the rent money away to do that."

"Nobody would expect us to live here for weeks," Bertie Lou defended herself. "I thought we'd leave in a day or two. But if we move into the apartment now I'd have to get a bed davenport, and I wanted one that was built to sit on."

"What's the matter with an army cot for me, as we planned?"

"You couldn't endure it for weeks."

"Well, I don't like the idea of going to another hotel. It would cost too much."

Bertie Lou puckered her brows over the careful attention she was giving her fingernails. "I have it," she exclaimed brightly. "We'll have Mums sell our things in Wayville and we'll buy everything here. Then we can have everything we want. Some of our stuff wouldn't fit in the apartment very well anyhow."

"But Bertie Lou, I'd hate to spend all the money we have on furniture," Rod objected.

"You needn't. We could buy on the deferred payment plan. Use the money we get for our furniture as the down payment and pay the balance like rent."

Rod frowned. "You know I saved pretty hard to buy that furniture. And we wouldn't get anything for it."

"I know," Bertie Lou admitted softly. "But we simply can't live in a half-empty apartment. A few days wouldn't have made any difference. But weeks! We might as well buy furniture as pay hotel rent when we already have the apartment paid for."

"But I'm beginning to see that $63 a week won't keep us in the style to which Wayville has accustomed us," Rod replied, a little more than half seriously.

Bertie Lou came over and straightened his tie.

"Let's make a budget when we get back tonight and see," she coaxed. "Other young people—married couples—live well in New York. And I'm sure there aren't thousands of men any smarter than you are."

Rod laughed. "Budget! Know any more funny ones?"

"We won't have a party until we get the furniture paid for," Bertie Lou promised pleadingly. "And if we stay in a hotel Molly will keep on asking us to dinner. That means taking them out to expensive restaurants in return."

"I haven't lost more than $5."

But that night he had unusually good luck and won back his five before Bertie Lou came in to watch the game.

She came up behind his chair and looked over his shoulder at the pile of chips before him. There were a number of blue and red ones. She knew he was winning. Still she tried to draw him away from the game. Suggested they ought to go.

Rod felt embarrassed and looked sympathetically at the other men. Bertie Lou ought to know he had to give them a chance to win their money back. "Pretty soon," he said impatiently to her.

Before the evening was over all but he regretted his refusal to stop playing. He had won rather a large sum. And, to show how he felt about it, he invited them all out to a supper club.

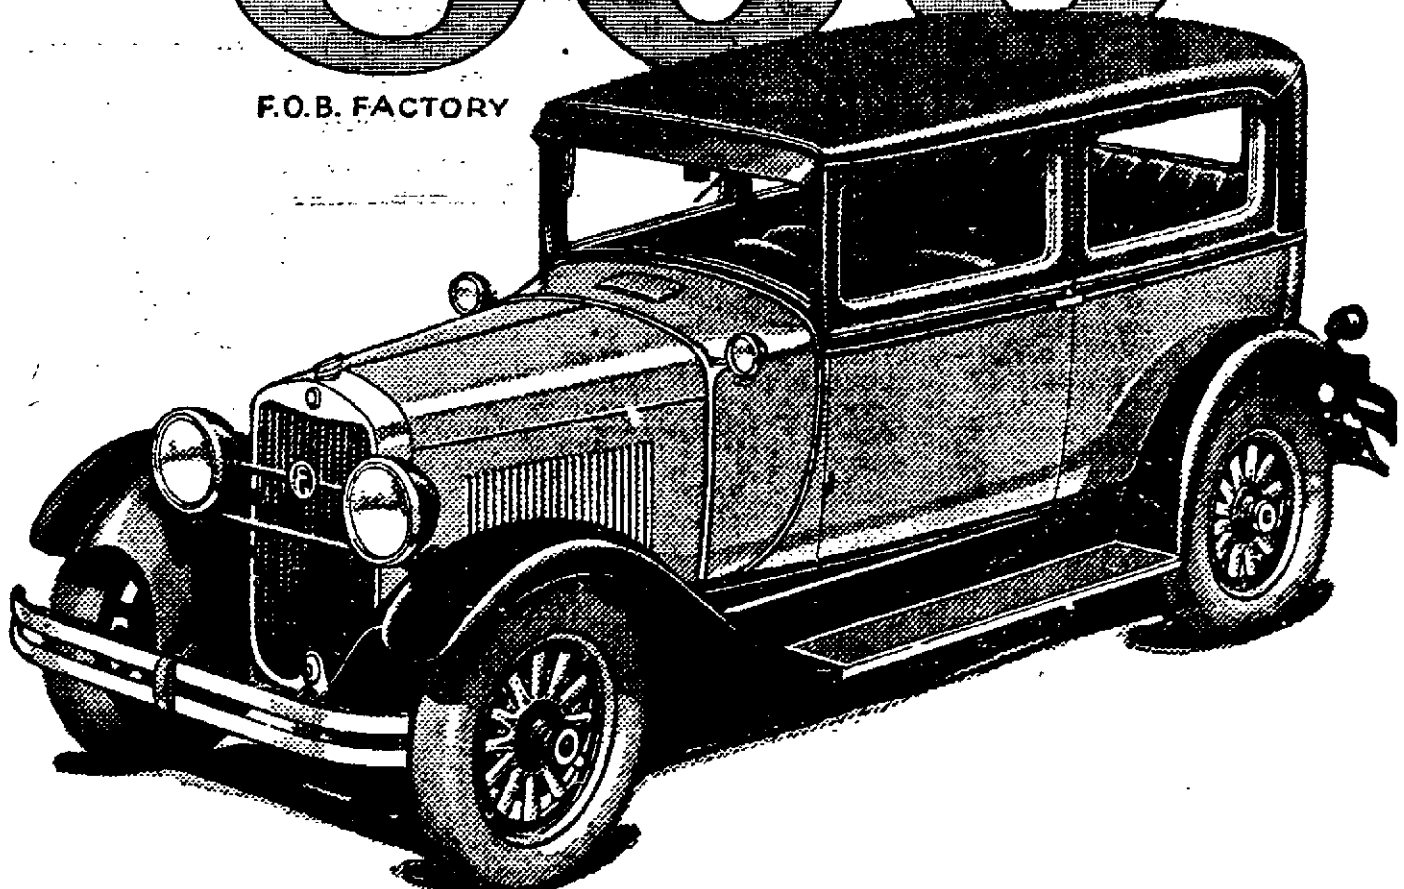

"Let's make it next Thursday," Molly suggested. She had a special reason for setting the date for that night.

Book Of Knowledge

Our Presidents

During Washington's first term there had been no political parties in the country, but during his second term the people began to divide. There were Federalists, led by Alexander Hamilton and John Adams, believing in a strong central government. Republicans, founded by Thomas Jefferson, and later called Democrats, believed in "that government which governs the least."

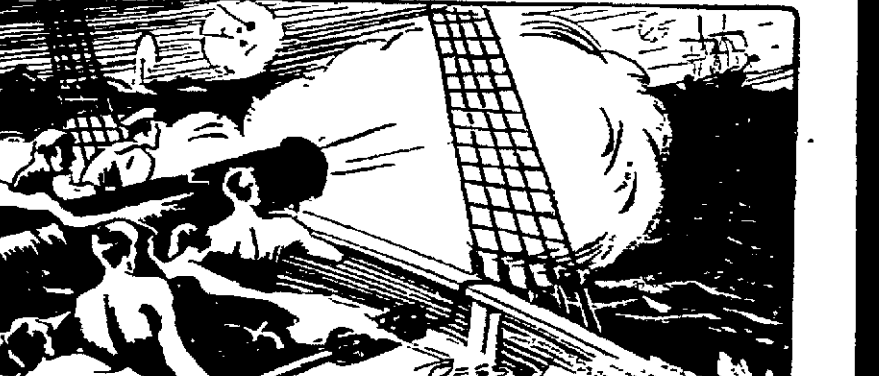

By REA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge, Copyright, 1923-26.

Adams, a Massachusetts man, had been vice president under Washington. He was elected president in 1797. Trouble with France ensued at once.

The French, angry because we had not helped them fight England, began to seize our vessels. They offered to cease the practice if bribes were tendered French officials.

A wave of indignation swept the country and Charles C. Pinckney, minister to France, made his famous remark, "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute." The United States prepared for war and there were a few naval battles, but France soon offered to make peace. The rest of Adams' administration was stormy, following some foolish laws that will be explained tomorrow.

MOTOR VANS FACILITATE INTER-CITY TRANSFERS

New York (AP)—The moving man is looking for larger worlds to conquer.

Developments of the motorized moving van, which has virtually eliminated the horse-drawn vehicle, has made possible the organization of a cooperative association of furniture handlers with facilities for transfer of furniture and other necessities of packing between points throughout the country.

Local moving enterprises play the role largely of dispatching station controlling the movement of van lines over which will travel specially-designed moving vans fitted with large bodies incorporating even sleeping quarters for relief drivers.

As yet the moving service has been developed only between the Atlantic coast and Kansas City, but plans are under way for its extension to the Pacific coast, relief drivers keeping the vans traveling at night, as well as in day.

CHINESE KNOW HOW TO MAKE GOOD TEA

Shanghai (AP)—The fragrance of a cup of Chinese tea is an impression almost sure to be left on the mind of the most casual visitor to the Orient.

Tea prepared in China is a decidedly different article from that served by the average western housewife. The Chinese were the first to discover tea and are popularly supposed to know more than others about the methods of its preparation.

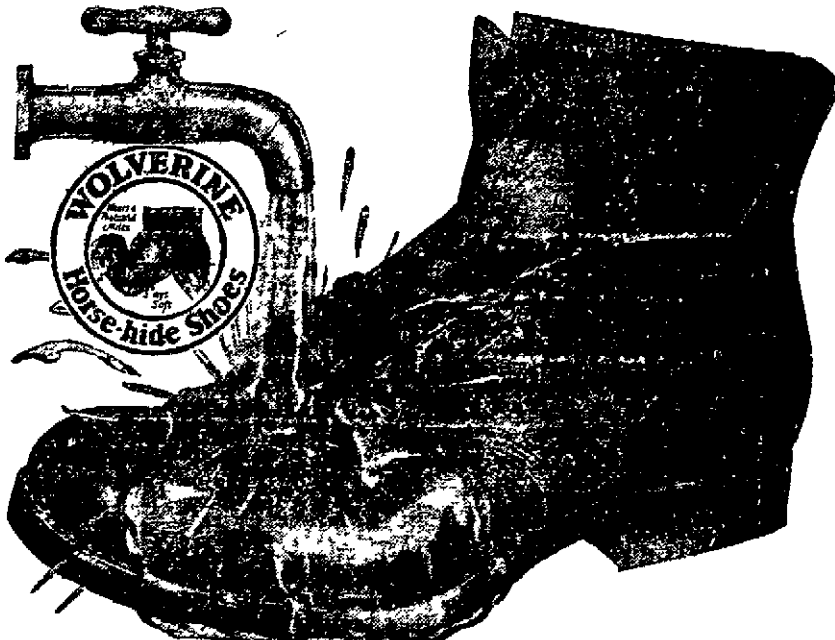

Chinese do not boil their tea. They place the leaves in small cups without handles, equipped with a cover. The cups are filled with water heated almost to the boiling point, and left to stand a few minutes.

Then, without the addition of sugar or cream the beverage is ready to be sipped. A Chinese drinks his tea with the cover of the cup moved just enough to allow his lips to touch the liquid. A cup of Chinese tea to be good must be kept over.

Tea drinking is universal in China. The highest and the best must have tea. The wealthy have theirs in private gardens while the poor gets his from a street vendor for a copper a cup.

TREE SAVES BOY

London—A tree saved the life of a boy at Llandudno recently. He was climbing on the rocks near the summit of the "Great Orme" when he slipped and fell down a cliff. Friends found him only slightly scratched in the branches of a tree 60 feet below.

They Dry Soft
After Soaking—Due to Wolverine Shell Cordovan Horsehide

Think of tramping through rain, snow, and mud all day—yet next morning you slip into work shoes as plump and soft as the day you bought them. Think of wearing shoes that never rip or tear. And that wear long after ordinary work shoes are thrown away.

That's what you can now buy in Wolverines—due to a special kind of horsehide called Shell Cordovan Horsehide, tanned for work shoes only by Wolverine. It is taken from the horse's hips and includes the shell which reinforces the outside hide. That's why Wolverines show no signs of wear for months and months. The seams are drawn into the surface so you can hardly feel them. And the acids of clay soils, sweaty feet, manure piles, or dairy floors don't eat the leather.

Try one pair of Wolverines and you'll always prefer them. We have all styles—at prices that are surprisingly reasonable. Come in today.
